Woodburn Council Puts Ban On Construction at Any Time or Place

WOODBURN, Aug. 10.—An ordinance regulating the construction rights of companies holding franchises within the city limits was passed at the special meeting of the city council Thursday afternoon after their adjournment until the date of their last regular meeting, Tuesday.

Under the new ordinance no construction work can be made until an application submitted by the company concerned has been approved by the council. Any one, whether individual or a company, violating this ordinance is subject to a fine of not less than $5 or more than $250 or not more than 30 days in the city jail. Both fine and imprisonment may be inferred if it is deemed necessary. The ordinance goes into effect immediately.

A petition was also presented at this time by the business men asking that the license tax on the medical shows be reduced. It is believed that under the present levy the shows set up outside the city limits and draw the people out, but if the tax were lowered they might draw people from the outside in. The petition was recognized and the ordinance committee was instructed to draw up an ordinance lowering the tax from $50 per day to $10.

WOMAN'S WILL WINNER Remarkable Showing Made on Fairview Farm MRS. R. C. DAY MODEST

Mrs. Callin

What one woman can do, given the determination and will to succeed is illustrated in the work of Mrs. R. C. Day of the Fairview district.

A few years ago the Days bought the unimproved farm where they now live and started to make it the place of their dreams.

Shortly afterward Mr. Day became ill with heart trouble and was unable to work. Friends advised Mrs. Day to dispose of the place because they deemed it impossible for a woman to do the work necessary.

With the courage which has characterized her work throughout Mrs. Day refused and went ahead to manage and work the farm.

Today it is a living tribute to her industry and good management. Berries, cherries, walnuts, hay and grain are all grown on the farm and grown successfully.

Mrs. Day does most of the work assisted by the children, of the family and in berry season by hired pickers.

Studies Berry Culture Mrs. Day has made a scientific study of berry culture and has one of the best looking berry fields in the district. The loganberries are trained on three wires with the vines held up by lath. This system is Mrs. Day's own invention and has proved such a boon to pickers that many other growers have copied it.

By using a formula for making fertilizer from straw, Mrs. Day has succeeded in getting excellent results from her berries without any great cash outlay for commercial fertilizer. She uses for each ton of straw 50 pounds of lime, three pounds of superphosphate and three pounds of sulphate of ammonia. This is packed in layers three feet deep and soaked with water. It takes about six months for this mixture to be ready for use.

This fertilizer, according to Mrs. Day is clean to use, does not sour and has given excellent results. This formula for fertilizer is recommended by both the Oregon and Missouri agricultural colleges and has proven very successful during the years it has been used on the Day farm.

Many Bees Are Kept Twenty-two stands of bees are kept by the Days and a ready market is always found for the fine quality of honey produced. Just now the bees are in the Aisea mountains for fall pasture. The fireweed growing here makes fine pasture and the honey produced is of first quality.

Mrs. Day does not talk of the difficulties she has met nor the ones she knows are ahead. She has a ready smile and a cheerful word for all who come. That she gets results is shown by the fact that she manages her own berry pickers and that for 18 pickers average one ton of berries in a day. She seems to inspire all who come in contact with her to work as faithfully as she does.
