The Marion Lake Development

THE proposed power enterprise in the Marion lake region has emerged from the promotion stage. The sponsorship now is no longer a dummy corporation but the dominant public utility corporation in the Willamette Valley. There should be no surprise at this disclosure for it was evident from the start that there could be no market for the power to be generated except through the power companies now controlling the distribution systems in the cities and towns of the valley. The only other eligible companies would be the Northwestern Electric company and the Mountain States Power company. But the Northwestern is pushing its development on Lewis river in Clark county, Washington, and the Mountain States is affiliated with the California-Oregon Power company with large plants in southern Oregon. The Portland Electric Power company therefore was the logical concern to move for the development when the imminent demand for power would force it to expand its facilities.

This removes the issue from the field of conjecture and mere promotion to one of live moment. A permit is not just a scrap of paper but a valuable franchise for the holder. In this case, if the permit is granted, nothing but high costs would prevent its utilization; because the Pep company's market for power is steadily growing.

Of course the previous claims of Promoter Kelley that this would bring to Salem a big quantity of power at low rates will prove illusory because the power will simply go into the big reservoir of all the company's power production. Rates, therefore, would be affected but slightly.

What should be Salem's attitude toward the application, now that, as some say, "Esau's hand" is disclosed? Salem has an interest in preserving rights for possible future use of the water for domestic purposee. True that is a long way in the future. But if the right agreement may be made with the power company the city's interests would be promoted rather than interfered with. The water storage would be provided at Marion Lake, and conduits would bring the water nia) line. His farm was on the down for many miles to near Detroit, giving protection from contamination and saving the city large investment in storage works and canals.

The invasion of the wilderness area of Marion river and miles below the old (Methodist) lake will be a real injury in the eyes of all those who love the mission buildings, about 10 miles north of where Salem now is. The great out-doors. But these damages may be held down. Even mission houses were about a mile so, there are other vast areas ministering to the recreational south of the Marion county end

The development, if it comes, will mean the expenditure of large sums of money in construction work, will add to the supply of power available for industry, will require the building of a road, much of which will be along the route of the boys at old Fort Vancouver in the North Santiam highway toward Santiam pass.
