BANDIT'S CAREER BROUGHT TO CLOSE

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 30—(AP)—The colorful career of Dick Gregg, notorious outlaw of the southwest, was ended abruptly today in a gun fight on the outskirts of Tulsa which also claimed the lives of two county highway patrolmen.

Ross Darrow and Link Bowline, the officers, lost their lives in an effort to bring to justice the man wanted for a number of bank robberies in Oklahoma and Kansas. One of them was killed after Gregg himself had been mortally wounded.

The shooting took place on the outskirts of Tulsa on the Sand Springs highway when the two officers, who apparently were expecting Gregg along, met him face to face. When the officers met Gregg and a companion, who was arrested as he fled from the scene of the shooting, Gregg drove his machine off the concrete slab and stopped.

A woman who witnessed the shooting said that when Gregg brought his automobile to a stop one of the officers jumped to the running board of the car while the other started to turn the officer's machine around to drive up alongside Gregg's car. The officer covered Gregg with a gun but Gregg whipped out his pistol and shot him down.

Just as the shooting started the other officer drove up. He opened fire on the bandit who returned the fire before falling. Both fell, dying. Gregg's companion fled when the shooting started but was arrested a short time later. He said his name was Bob Dyer.

STOCK MARKET KEEPS STRIDE

Scores of leading issues shot ahead 3 to 15 points, including utilities, rails, coppers, food and farm implement issues, steels and chemicals. Several large operators were said to have entered the market in decisive manner, and powerful bullish operations more than offset the holiday liquidation, and what nervous selling was prompted by the increase in loans. The act that call money moved no higher than 9 per cent, despite the month end and holiday money requirements, was regarded as indicating more stable credit conditions and was highly reassuring.

Evergreen Blackberries Found Paying Proposition When Properly Cared For

By MADALENE L. CALLIN

Mrs. Callin

"Many have tried to raise evergreen blackberries and quit because it did not pay. They will pay well if properly cared for," said S. M. Ray of the Elkins district.

Mr. Ray has 13 acres of cultivated evergreens on his farm and they have proven a profitable crop, largely because they are irrigated. Since the irrigation system has been installed the yield has been increased more than a ton to the acre, according to Mr. Ray.

The water for irrigation is brought from the Little Luckiamute river by a four-inch centrifugal pump and the berries are irrigated but twice during the year, once in July and again in August.

Ditch Irrigation Falls

Ditch irrigation will not work here, according to Mr. Ray. The berries are all irrigated by means of 6 inch pipe, each piece 10 feet long. An average of 400 gallons of water each minute is thrown to the berries and only a minute is devoted to the irrigation of each ten feet of ground.

A man and one helper can irrigate an average of two acres a day by this method. The berry land is under water from the river overflow a part of each winter and a great deal of sediment is deposited in this way. For this reason no fertilizer is used. Mr. Ray expects to harvest 60 tons of berries from his 13 acres this year.

Fifty-two pickers are now employed at the Ray farm and an average of three tons of berries each day are sent to the Reid-Murdoch cannery at West Salem. Last year on one field of three acres more than 18 tons of berries were harvested.

The first irrigation system which Mr. Ray bought proved to be too small and was not a success. The one now in use cost approximately $1500 and according to Mr. Ray, paid for itself the first irrigation.

Constant work is required the year round in the berry fields. Posts must be reset, wires repaired, the plants pruned and trained and it is only this constant care that make the crop a profitable one.

Hop Picking on In Dallas Area

DALLAS, August 30.—Picking of early cluster hops in the Dallas district commenced Tuesday morning. Hugh Smith finished his 10 acre yard in two days, the 18 acres in the C. N. Bilyeu yard, operated by Plaster Bros., will require at least five days, after which the 20 acres of late hops will take two weeks.

Other yards of late hops will probably commence picking Tuesday day of next week. The yield will not be exceptionally good, in some cases three fourths of a crop is indicated. Some of the yards have had considerable money and mold, others are quite clean, with large hops.

The first irrigation system which Mr. Ray bought proved to
