

Local News Briefs

Disease Increases—Nine cases of communicable diseases were reported in Marion county for the week ending September 7, shows the current bulletin of the state department of health. Of these cases, four were mumps, two typhoid, two tuberculosis, including one in the state hospital, and one was diphtheria. Disease over the state was low for the week, ten cases of any one malady being the highest reported. Four cases of malaria were found in Lane county.

Mrs. Creech at High School—Mrs. Eula S. Creech, head of domestic science in the high and junior high schools will have her headquarters at the high school building this year instead of the Parish junior high. Mrs. Creech will also have direct charge of the senior high school girls' work. The change was made as a result of the resignation this summer of Mrs. Gladys Jensen, head of the senior high domestic science department.

Teachers Hurry too Much—A number of teachers' certificates which are being received at the county school superintendent's office are having to be returned because they have not been filled out properly. To avoid delay in this matter, the superintendent asks that teachers look their papers over carefully before sending or bringing them in. Certificates are coming in fast, now that school is being opened in most districts of the county.

FARM EXCHANGES ARE EFFECTED HERE

Advent of fall has ushered activity in farm exchanges and transfers than has been known about here for several months, with the latest large deal reported from the real estate department of the American Fidelity company, J. F. Ulrich handling the exchange.

In this deal, two large farms changed owners, Jacob Dauenhauer exchanging his 426-acre grain and dairy ranch in Polk county for the 92-acre farm belonging to J. J. McKibben. The McKibben farm is located a half mile east of Ballston in the Bellview district, and is also essentially a grain and dairy ranch. Consideration on the Dauenhauer farm was $25,000 and on the McKibben property $12,000. Both men will take possession of their new holding immediately.

The ranch just sold by Dauenhauer is said to be one of the best ranches across the river, and as improvements go is considerably above the average. J. F. Ulrich, who made the deal, owned this ranch until about eight years ago, and while he was there built one of the largest farm houses in the country, a 52 by 28 foot structure modern in every way. The house contains 11 large rooms, including seven bedrooms.

Ulrich sold the farm to J. E. Fitzhugh, who sold to C. Groom. Dauenhauer has owned the place about three years. The McKibben farm is also a choice acreage, however improvements are not up to those on the farm which he secures in the deal.

INDIAN PUPILS WILL GET HEALTH SURVEY

Preliminary plans for the first health survey of pupils at the Chemawa Indian school were made here the first of the week when Dr. E. H. Pierce, chairman of the clinic committee of the state tuberculosis association, met with a group of local health heads to discuss plans for the survey. The clinic survey will be held beginning November 12 and lasting six or seven days, or until each of the 750 pupils have been examined.

The survey will be held jointly under auspices the state tuberculosis association, the Chemawa school and the Indian service. Members of the Marion county child health demonstration, will participate as will other local physicians. About 40 physicians will conduct the clinic, six or seven working each day.

Primary object of the survey is to find out just what the tuberculosis rate among the Indians at the school is, inasmuch as Indians are generally believed to be more susceptible to the disease than other persons. Just a year ago the state association conducted a clinical survey of the Indians on the Klamath reservation, and found that in the 450 examined, less than three per cent had open or real tuberculosis, whereas tuberculosis was reported to be 50 per cent strong there.

Present at the preliminary meeting here were: Dr. Pierce, Dr. H. N. Siegel and Superintendent Lipps of Chemawa, Dr. Scollard of the Indian service, Dr. G. C. Bellinger of the state tuberculosis hospital, Miss Grace Holmes of the state tuberculosis association in Portland, Dr. Estella Ford Warner, Dr. V. A. Douglas and Dr. Edward Lee Russell, all of the county child health demonstration.

Freshman Week is Started At Willamette University

Quite a bustle was observable late Wednesday afternoon on the Willamette university campus. The first faculty meeting of the year had just ended, and old professors were greeting new ones with a gusto not unlike that with which older students meet newcomers. Everyone gave evidence of being eager for the year to begin.

Students began to arrive in Salem yesterday morning and quite a number began to buy themselves by looking for their homes for the coming year. Several came in on the evening trains and the large number of arrivals at this morning. Most of the early arrivals are new students, but a few are officers of the fraternities and sororities, and are in the city early in order to prepare their respective houses for the numerous guests they will entertain during the next two weeks.

The forenoon freshmen will enroll with the registrar preparatory to taking the English classifying examination in the afternoon. The balance of the morning will be taken up with conferences with the advisors assigned to them.

At 1:15 this afternoon the freshmen will take the English entrance examination which will determine their type of work for the coming year. At 4 o'clock the newcomers will assemble in the university chapel to hear a talk, "Branches of Knowledge," by Dean Erickson. At 7:30 they will reassemble in the chapel to receive official welcoming from President Carl G. Doney. They will be ready to call it a day.

Friday and Saturday will be largely filled with conferences with professors. Actual registration of the freshmen will take place Monday morning. Late shipments of textbooks were being arranged on the shelves of the University bookstore Wednesday by Francis DeHartport, manager, in anticipation of the heavy selling which will come next Monday and Tuesday. A rearrangement of the shelves and building of new ones has added much to the convenience of the store.

DR. DONEY RETURNS FROM EASTERN TRIP

Dr. Carl G. Doney, president of Willamette university, returned Wednesday from a trip east. Most important of the business done by him was placing a request with the Rockefeller foundation for extension of time on collection of pledges to the university endowment. At present the foundation will recognize only pledges paid by October 1 of this year, but it is hoped that one year's extension will be given the university. The general education board will meet near the middle of September to consider the request of Willamette university, and it is hoped that a substantial amount of cash on pledges made in the campaign last spring will be in hand by that time.
