Let Constitution Day Be Observed Tuesday September 17

The Constitution of the United States of America is the product of a few great minds assembled in a brief convention. The greatest of modern statesmen has termed it "the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time, by the brain and purpose of man." This characterization has been accepted by all thinking men.

The framers of the Constitution had had no means of previous personal communication by telegraph and almost none by mail. There were no stenographers nor typewriters; there was indeed no clerical assistance; for the proceedings of the Constitutional convention were secret and the clerical work was done by great men. However, these same men were thoroughly conversant with contemporary governments. They were also conversant with governments of ancient times.

Mrs. David Wright, past worthy mother of Chadwick chapter, order of Rainbow girls, which organization are planning a bridge tea benefit for Thursday afternoon.

As the time was brief, so were the framers few. The convention was composed of 55 members; the Constitution was signed by 39, including Washington.

When we look down one hundred years and see the origin of our Constitution, when we contemplate all its trials and triumphs, when we realize how completely the principles upon which it is based have met every national need and every national peril, how devoutly should we say with Franklin "God govern in the affairs of men, and how solemnly should be thought that to us is delivered this ark of the people's covenant, and to us is given the duty to shield it from impious hands."

It comes to us with the test of more than a century. It has been found sufficient in the past, and it will be found sufficient in the years to come, if the American people are true to their sacred trust. As the centuries come and go millions yet unborn will inquire concerning our stewardship and the safety of the Constitution. God grant that they may find it unimpaired; and rejoice, as we do today, in the patriotism and devotion of those who lived in those telling times of our great nation. May those who follow us rejoice in our fidelity and love for Constitutional liberty.
