Large Tea Honors Mrs. Edwards of Portland

The largest formal tea of the early autumn season was given Friday afternoon by members of the Delta Phi sorority at their chapterhouse on Court street, honoring their new house mother, Mrs. Paul Edwards of Portland. More than 100 town and faculty women called during the tea hours.

In the receiving line were the honor guest, Mrs. Edwards, and Mrs. Frank Erickson, Miss Olive Dahl, Mrs. Clarence D. Phillips, and the acting president of Delta Phi, Miss Pauline Findley. Miss Margaret Bolt introduced to the line, and Miss Virginia Edwards greeted the guests at the door.

Mrs. R. E. Hewitt and Miss Beryl Holt poured during the first hour, with Mrs. C. P. Blisshop and Mrs. R. J. Hendricks presiding later in the afternoon. Underclass girls assisted in the serving. The tea table was attractively decked with asters in pastels, shades, and a profusion of asters, used in the spacious living rooms.

Musical numbers were offered by Miss Marjorie Miller and Miss Lillian Scott, sopranos, and by Miss Helen Price and Miss Edith Findley, pianists.

Lads Put in Time Making Tiny Planes

By MADALENE L. CALLIN That problem of "something for them to do" which so frequently presents itself to the parents of small boys has been interestingly solved by one group in Salem.

A short time ago Orville Varty, son of Mrs. Susan Varty, became interested in the building of model airplanes. He studied patiently and finally began experiments in building planes. Much time and patience was expended before satisfactory results were obtained but at last he had a model that would fly.

This first success inspired him to further efforts and soon he was attempting more difficult construction. Other boys of the neighborhood became interested and a small work bench was fitted up in the basement of Orville's Stimplest Kind of Tools Are Used.

Their tools are very simple, pliers, a pocket knife and much sand paper are the principal aids to the work. To "listen in" on the talk of the boys is an education to the one who knows little of the way they are doing. "Balance, wing spread, balsaw wood, Japanese tissue paper, white pine, piano wire, banana oil" and many other terms are frequently heard.

The boys are shining examples of patience and persistence. The first attempt at construction is seldom successful and much time is spent in correcting their own mistakes, but they learn by doing.

It is not unusual for parents to "call time" and send the boys away from the work bench at ten o'clock at night. Among the interested boys who work with Orville Varty are Burton Rapp, Dan Clark, Oscar Gingrich, Merle Smith, Arthur Mathewly, Christopher Jensen and Robert Rammage.

The ambition of each boy is to belong to the American Air Cadets and several of them have attained the rank of "Pilot" in the order. Others who are still "pumpkin heads" are working in the hope of being able to "entitle" them to receive the honor of "Pilot." Those who are now Pilots are working to become Aces. To attain the Ace honor one must complete a plane having a 24-inch wing spread, which is no small task.

That real results are being obtained is proven by the fact that plans with a 12-inch wing spread, made by Orville Varty, in a few days made two complete circles high in the air and finally landed on the roof of the house. The motive power for the planes is supplied by especially treated rubber bands.

Ladish Pumpkins Stolen; Bad Luck Sare to Follow

LADISH, Sept. 20.—It is always with a feeling of remorse that we see the fruits of long labor destined to nothing over night. Charles Perkins, a local resident, discovered this for himself. Mr. Perkins' surge of emotions did not pause with remorse, however; in fact there glowed in his eye the fire of righteous indignation.

... of someone, in the night, had pilfered his pumpkins. His prize pumpkin! Gone! The pumpkins which he had tenderly watched and cared for throughout the summer in the hope that when Fall time came—well, that was to be pumpkin history.

Also! How often our dreams are in vain! And such fine pumpkins they were too. Charles gleams satisfaction nevertheless from an incident to the humorous crime: The robbers were so singularly inattentive as to steal thirteen of his pumpkins.

Hence, by this time the villagers are probably suffering the pangs of indigestion which would be induced from eating a pie made from one of thirteen stolen pumpkins... or maybe one of the pumpkins fell on the scoundrel-in-chief's gony foot. At least, Mr. Perkins hopes so.

Yearlings Go Through Their Paces

With the chant of W-I-L-L-A; M-E-T-T-E, the freshman class at Willamette university marched from the campus to the courthouse lawn Friday afternoon. This year the march was much shorter than usual, as no circuit of the downtown district was made.

Before the march the freshmen were instructed in the university traditions which they will be expected to observe this year. The list was noticeably shorter than those of previous years. The most noticeable change was in the freshman headgear. Formerly the yearlings have worn green caps and green ribbons, but this year the caps are in the university colors, cardinal and gold, and the girls' ribbons, likewise are of the university colors. Instead of wearing this insignia until May day, as in past years, the freshmen will be required to wear them only until homecoming time in November at which time some spectacular disposition will be made of the caps.

On arrival at the courthouse yesterday the oddly clad students joined in a university song. Men
