Fair Glances

The seventeenth street entrance will be open to automobile traffic this year, making three ways to come in. The other two run off Fairgrounds road and the Silverton road.

Prominent Oregonians from all over the state will be in Salem tomorrow to attend the dedication ceremony of the new grandstand.

The largest express train of show horses ever run on the Pacific coast will arrive here Monday night from Pomona in time for the opening of the horse show Tuesday night.

Just 67 years ago this week, the state fair became a Salem institution, by vote of the State Agricultural Society, Eugene, Corvallis and Oregon City received votes, but Salem was chosen by overwhelming majority. The fair was held the first year at Gladstone.

The new $150,000 grandstand is one of the finest buildings of its kind on the Pacific coast, according to those who make the circuits of all the fairs.

This is truly a "fair year" say officials who have been "making" the other fairs in the northwest this season. The weather has been ideal. Most sections of the country are prosperous. Farmers have received big prices for their products. The attractions are above the average that usually come to the fairs. The race horses are of a higher class and there are more of them. All these facts go towards making bigger and better fairs from every angle. Many northwest fairs have established new attendance records this year.

A new and complete loud speaker broadcasting is being set up to cover the entire new grandstand at the state fair. The patrons will be kept informed as to everything that is going on whether it be on the track in the paddock or on the stage by Announcer Herb Sutherland of Spokane, who acts as announcer and program director of 14 of the northwest and state fairs. The speakers are also being installed in the horse show stadium where the night crowds are to be kept fully informed as to what is transpiring in the show ring.

A Scotch bagpipe band has been secured to entertain the crowds on the midway, in the various buildings and lawns during fair week. These tuneful pipers will keep things livened up for those who do not care to attend the grandstand or stadium events.

The American Legion drum and bugle corps, G. A. R. rifle and drum corps, Portland police quartet, county community club, state grange societies, fraternal drill teams and many other special features will be daily added grandstand attractions to be seen at the state fair during the week.

Show and horsemen who follow the northwest fair circuit are always glad to get to Salem. It is one fair on the circuit they love to work. The grounds are so clean and the crowds are so appreciative, that even the race horses seem to give their best efforts when they once a year set hoof on the Lone Oak track.

Track records are expected to be shattered on the Salem fairgrounds track before the week is over. Horsemen who already have arrived on the grounds are loud in their praise of the track condition. It is the best of any on the entire circuit, they say. With the class of horses that will be here to compete and the fast contention, they freely predict that new track records for the various distances will be set up before the week is over.

Mary, one of the trained elephants, appearing at Oregon state fair this year, has learned a new trick which she will try out before the Salem grandstand spectators sometime during the week. Mary has just learned that she has a perfect voice for radio broadcasting. Now everytime she sees a microphone she has to stop and squeal into it before her trainer, Captain Spencer Huntley can drag her away with his big "bull hook."

Coming to Salem or to any fair in the west for the first time are the two Atencos who style themselves the Human Gyroscopes and Revolving Meteoras. They are direct from Germany where they have thrilled their countrymen for years with their thrilling whirling stunts at the very top of two slender, swaying and revolving poles.

Over 6,000 flags and pieces of bunting were used to decorate the automobile pavilion and the horse show stadium alone.

Mrs. Lenore Talbot, beautiful young matron and society leader of Albany, will hang the wreath on the winner of the Governor's Derby, on Wednesday, Salem day.

A number of the poultry exhibitors have been showing at the Oregon state fair for over 40 years, among whom are Frank Welch, Salem; Ben Keeney, Eugene, and Joe Limerick, Portland.

Three generations of Wheelers of Goshen, Lane county, are exhibiting poultry at the fair. Showing both Barred Rocks and White Leghorns, they are the largest exhibitors in the poultry division.

Saturday, September 28, the closing day will be given over to the entertainment of school children from all over the state. Special trains will leave Willamette valley points in the morning and return at night in time to return the children to their homes by bedtime.

LOCAL FURNITURE STORE EXPANDING

The Imperial Furniture company, operating a furniture store on Court street, is expanding its operations by the purchase of the Lebanon Furniture company at Lebanon, L. O. Smith, who has been connected with the local store since its opening two years ago, will move to Lebanon where he will be manager of the store there which will operate under the same name as the Salem store, Imperial Furniture company. James R. Humphrey, who has been with the Giese-Powers Furniture company for the past five years, has purchased an interest in the Imperial and will be connected with the local store. Both of these men are well-known in the furniture trade circles of Salem and are regarded as equipped with a complete knowledge of the business.

"This expansion step is taken only after a study of the Lebanon field where we believe there is a fine opportunity for a store of the character of ours. Our policy has been to make our store a display floor of typical furnishings, making selection easier for the purchaser, rather than to carry a large stock of duplicated items. The response we have met with and the success we have enjoyed the past two years convinces us that our store policy is right," said F. M. Litwiler, manager of the company in discussing the store's expansion.

LIME BEING USED IN BIG QUANTITIES

By MADALENE L. CALLIN
An ever growing appreciation of the value of lime on Willamette valley farms is being evidenced in all parts of the Salem district.

According to a report from Polk county more lime will be used there this fall than in all previous years put together. In Marion county many farmers have used lime previously and every one is an ardent booster, planning to use more during coming years.

That lime is a wonderful help in the growing of legume crops has been proven beyond doubt. However on wheat, corn and potatoes it is not so satisfactory, if local evidence can be taken as proof.

According to a recent report from the O. S. C. experiment station at Corvallis soils should not be limed without first testing to determine the need for lime.

BOUNTY REFUSED ON IMPROPER SCALPS

People bringing in scalps of gophers, moles, and gray diggers for bounty are becoming careless in their methods of handling them and unless more care is taken the bounty court will refuse to pay the bounty, as scalps must be in such condition that they can be positively identified, it is reported by U. G. Boyer, county clerk.

According to a pamphlet issued by the county clerk "a scalp shall contain the ears or ear holes and the face including the top of the nose." A good way of preserving a scalp is to tack it on a board by putting a small tack in each ear hole and one in the tip of the nose so the scalp will form a small triangle.

A great many scalps can be tacked on a board a foot wide and three feet long, and the board can then be hung up out of reach. When bringing in scalps in large numbers, they should be put on a string, counting ten scalps and then a piece of paper or cardboard between and then ten more scalps, which will make counting easy. Scalps of gophers, moles, and gray diggers should be kept separate."
