

PREMIER WILL VISIT GOTHAM

Head of British Government Expresses Satisfaction Over Sessions

Sir Harry Armstrong, British consul general at New York, greeted Mr. MacDonald on his arrival at Jersey City on a special train over the Baltimore and Ohio. The premier, his daughter, and the others in the party entered automobiles for the short drive to a special ferry boat.

New York's skyline viewed with interest. Mr. MacDonald was escorted to the bridge of the craft where he opened and read a sheet of cablegrams handed to him. Then he gave himself over to viewing New York's skyline and the shipping in the harbor as the ferry moved up the Hudson to her dock on the Manhattan side.

One of the messages received by the prime minister was from Herman Mueller, the German chancellor, thanking him on behalf of the German government and people for his generous tribute to the late Gustav Stresemann, German minister of foreign affairs, in the address Mr. MacDonald made before the senate last Monday.

Except at Baltimore and Philadelphia, the prime minister remained in the private car placed at his disposal by the railroad. But Ishbel made an inspection of the special train, consisting of two Pullmans, a luxurious lounge dinner and a baggage coach. In the last one she talked to the engineer, W. H. (Bill) Markey, over the train telephone.

Two Days Kept Free For Private Engagements

Three public appearances of the prime minister have been arranged for tomorrow, but Saturday and Sunday have been kept free for his own private engagements, Monday he will leave for Niagara Falls and Tuesday cross into Canada.

At noon tomorrow Mr. MacDonald will attend a luncheon given under the auspices of the St. Andrew's, St. George's and St. Daniel's societies and the English Speaking Union in conjunction with other British organizations. At 4 p. m., he will attend a reception by the Foreign Policy association and in the evening attend a dinner to be given in his honor by the council of foreign relations.

At the dinner and beginning at 9 p. m., the premier will speak to a radio audience in this country, Canada and Great Britain.

CLOSE OF COOKING SCHOOL IS TODAY

fernoon. There was angel food and chocolate, orange juice cake and West India cake, with many kinds of icing to go with them. Every woman loves a fine cake and either takes pride in baking them or is eager to learn how to bake them if she doubts her skill.

Thursday the ladies of Salem had wonderful instruction in the fine art of cake-baking. Mrs. Erickson represented the Salem Women's club in presenting Mrs. Hubbard to the audience yesterday.

Baking Contest Comes Today

This is the culminating day for the cooking school. The baking contest will take place, the judging occurring at the former Kaffory store room in the Johnson building on State street. Cakes and pies are to be brought in between 9 and 12:30. The judges will grade the baked goods and award the grand prizes.

At the conclusion of the cooking school session at the Grand announcement will be made there of the winners of the grand prizes. Following that the school will adjourn to the baking contest headquarters where the sale of the baked goods will take place. The Women's club is in charge of the bake sale and the proceeds go to the building fund of the club.

School Moves Off Satisfactorily

Salem women have been very profuse in their compliments to the Statesman on the way the cooking school has been run off. They have praised the instructor and feel that they have derived much profit from the work given by Mrs. Hubbard. The Statesman school is an annual event.

PRIESTESS ADMITS 'CURE' BY BAKING

Portland, Ore., businessman and father of Ward Blackburn, the elderly cult leader's youthful husband, said the woman given the orange cure was Mrs. Frances May Turner, a paralytic. She refused to state whether Mrs. Turner died in the oven. The cure was advised by angels, she said, who talked with her daughter.

Discrepancies in Report Being Checked

Turner's body was buried in Ventura, Calif., early in 1928, and alleged discrepancies in her death certificate are being checked.

The second major development today in the investigation of this cult came with the discovery in Ventura of the grave of Mrs. Harlone Satoris, 30-year-old former Tokan woman. Mrs. Satoris' death certificate was signed by Dr. F. A. Yoakum, of Moor Park, Cal., on May 4, 1928. Dr. Yoakum said he had attended the woman during her last illness, but had not been present when she died at the cult's colony.

Dr. A. C. Pratt, of Chatsworth, Cal., said she had been summoned to the colony to sign Mrs. Satoris' death certificate, but refused, because the woman had been dead several days.

Mysterious Box is Sought by Officers

Search for a box which William Rhoads, cultmember, said he buried in the San Bernardino mountains three months ago, so far was unavailing.

Mrs. Martha Rhoads, wife of William Rhoads, is being held in jail in connection with the discovery of the body of her foster daughter, Willa Rhoads, 19, buried under the flooring of their beach home. Mrs. Rhoads said the girl died three years ago of diphtheria, and her death was concealed because Mrs. May Otis Blackburn received supernatural information that she would arise.

The high priestess and her daughter, Ruth Welland Rizko, are held in default of $10,000 bond on bunco charges.

one of the best studies the pupil can take and that more should be taught within the school, but that he would rather see pupils take the class after regular school hours, that the study might not break into the regular school routine.

The principal further pointed out that so far as the high school curriculum is concerned, it is of little use for pupils to include music as a part of their high school credit, inasmuch as Willamette university will accept no music credits on entrance requirements and that the two state educational institutions will accept but two years' music toward entrance. The high school will allow music credits toward the secondary diploma.

INDEPENDENTS MAY DISCIPLINE MAYOR

now, gets his next opportunity, aside from the veto power, to swat the opposition.

The mayor's big chance comes in the matter of committee appointments. For three successive Januaries he has held this club over the heads of recalcitrant aldermen, to force them into acts which met with his approval. Each time, he held up the appointments until the council had elected the city officers the mayor wanted.

Next January, with so many aldermen openly opposing him—not personally, but because of his advisors—the mayor would be in position to divorce every one of the independents from any connection with the important committees, within which much of the council's real work is performed.

But, under the city charter, the mayor is not guaranteed the power of making committee appointments; that has been granted by the council itself, and the council has the power to take it back. So far as the city charter is concerned, it would require only a majority vote of the aldermen, to take the appointive power away from the mayor and assign it to a committee on committees, subject to the approval of the council as a whole.

The independents are keeping strictly silent on the subject, but it is entirely possible that some of them have been sitting up nights reading the charter.

interest in the company, has as yet no definite announcement of his plans. However he and Earl Paulsen, who has been with the company for a number of years and who is well-known here through his American Legion and other activities, are planning to go to Los Angeles to engage in the same business. Mr. Huston's family has been in Los Angeles for more than a year. Huston and Paulsen will remain with the company here until the first of the month.

The new owners contemplate no immediate alterations in the building and will work along the same broad policy that has always characterized the funeral home.

No one has been selected to fill Taylor's vacated place.

Prunes Unharmed By Recent Rains

Not all of the prunes grown in the Salem district have been harvested, but they are now past the stage at which rain can harm them, local men familiar with crop conditions report. The rains of several days ago caused practically no damage, it was reported. Some of the dryers are idle after handling all of the crop in sight, but in other places harvesting is still under way.

NATIONAL MARKET GROUP SUGGESTED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—(AP)—Formation of a national marketing organization for another major agricultural industry, livestock, is the next objective of the farm board.

It was announced today that a call has been issued for a meeting of cooperative marketing associations of the livestock industry in Chicago on October 23 to discuss plans for a national organization. All livestock cooperatives will be permitted to participate.

At the same time during a visit to the board by representatives of the Farmers' National Grain corporation, Chairman Legge said the $20,000,000 corporation would be ready to start marketing operations by November 1.

Four representatives of the corporation, headed by William Settle of Indiana submitted articles of incorporation of the organization for the board's approval. Accompanying Settle were John Manley, of Enid, Okla., F. J. Cottingham, of Stanhope, Iowa; and C. E. Huff, of Salina, Kans.

Officials of ten leading livestock cooperatives and presidents of five national farm organizations have been invited to the Chicago conference. In announcing the meeting the board in a statement cites that during 1928, cooperatives sold $289,152,931 worth of livestock or approximately 80 per cent of the livestock marketed. In a number of large terminal markets there are several competing cooperatives, and the board is seeking to coordinate their efforts through a national organization.

THREE PHYSICIANS TO EXAMINE FALL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—(AP)—On the report of three physicians who examined Albert B. Fall today under orders of the District of Columbia supreme court depends the decision whether the bribery trial of the former interior secretary will continue or be declared a mistrial.

The later course seemed more likely tonight, as one physician other than Fall's personal doctor told Justice Hitz today that the aged defendant was not able to stand trial. Fall has not left his hotel room since Tuesday, when he was assisted from the courtroom on the verge of collapse.

little room into my office (before the alleged attack) when Pantages came down with Miss Pringle. This was that afternoon. (August 9) I judge Pantages asked if I had been in the little room."

Previous Arrangement For Testimony Suspected

Pitts commenced questioning of Jobelman, attempting to learn if Pantages had not instructed him to give certain testimony. The move brought down a flood of objections from the defense which clearly irritated the prosecutor.

"Now your honor," Pitts protested, "here is a witness still on the payroll of this defendant. I will state we should be granted latitude in endeavoring to obtain evidence from him."

The court concurred but warned the prosecutor to beware of leading questions.

Returning to his questioning, Pitts' efforts were met by repeated "no sirs" from the witness, amid subsequent defense objections which were sustained.

"Did you come to the district attorney's office during the investigation of this matter?" Pitts asked. "Yes sir."

"Did you make a statement to the district attorney?" "Yes sir." A recess was taken at this point.

Still Blows Up Killing Lyle Lemon

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 10.—(AP)—Lyle Lemon was killed instantly and Carl Riverman was severely burned today when a small still exploded in an east side residence here, police said.

Fragments of the exploded tank struck Lemon, causing his death, investigators declared. Residents of the neighborhood of the distillery said the explosion was audible for several blocks. Windows and doors rattled in nearby houses.

Witnesses said that immediately after the explosion the upper floor of the residence burst into flames. Riverman was burned about the face and hands in making his escape from the house. He told police Lemon had been standing near the still.

Lemon's body was found by firemen but it had not been touched by the flames.

The Salem Lions club is starting the ticket selling campaign today for the Moroni Olsen Players. The first play of the season, "Twelve Thousand," will be given at the Elsinore theatre November 1.

The ladies of the A. A. of W. of Salem, who are assisting in the ticket selling campaign met last evening and outlined their plans. Their committee members are: Miss Olive Dahl, Miss Isabel Robinson, Mrs. George H. Alden, Mrs. Roy A. Klein and Mrs. Karl Pease.

Newell Williams has been put in charge of the ticket selling for the Lions and he has appointed the following captains to assist him—A. C. Haag, Wm. Scandling, E. B. Grabenhorst, C. F. Doane and Rance Niles.

Salem Woman is Called by Death

Miss Una Gunn died Thursday at the home 430 South 14th street, at the age of 55 years. Miss Gunn and her mother, Mrs. Charity Gunn, who is 80 years old, have made their home together in Salem for the past 10 years, or since they returned to Oregon from Missouri. Miss Una was born near Bethel, in Polk county, and when five years old left with her family for Missouri, where they resided until 1919.

Besides her mother, she is survived by one sister, Mrs. Lucy Campbell, of Salem, and a brother who resides in Wisconsin. The remains are in care of the Terwilliger funeral home, and will be shipped to Bolivar, Missouri, for services and interment.

LINDY FINISHES TOUR OF RUINS

Great Highway Centuries Old Sought by Exploring Aviators

time of the Spanish conquest of Mexico. Well preserved statuary showing the Maya deity, the feathered serpent, and other figures were found by the workmen.

Following a plan of flight decided on last week, Colonel Lindbergh headed for Cuba on the mainland, one of the largest Maya ruins, but set only briefly studied. The object was to try to pick up signs of a great ancient highway built of rock and believed to have been used to connect Cuba with other cities of Yucatan.

Temple of Coba Viewed From Air

Forty-five minutes after the start the plane was over the great square temple at Coba which, with pyramids, formed the central plaza of the old city. The community was strung along the banks of two lakes. After circling the central tours, the plane's party clearly identified other mounds some distance away but obviously part of the ancient settlement.

Only crumbling bits of masonry atop the highest pyramids can be seen today. The bush and jungle growths have swallowed all relics closer to the natural surface and have hidden them from the eyes of men afoot.

Colonel Lindbergh spent some time circling around these sites, but no sign of the stone highway could be discovered. Therefore he turned back and by noon the big machine had passed over Cozumel again and was well out over the Yucatan straits on its way to Cuba.

Eight Years Work Done in One Week

Every one was enthusiastic over the results of the five days of exploration from the air. In that time the party had covered a distance that would have taken about eight years for an expedition on mule-back, cutting its way painfully through the jungle and had plotted all but one small bit of what heretofore had been blank spots on the maps of Yucatan and Quintana Roo, in Mexico, and in sections of Guatemala and British Honduras.

The flight had also proved that planes could be used to transport scientific parties into isolated localities in the jungle, accomplishing in a few hours what would require days and even weeks of painstaking and laborious effort if the task were attempted by land.

Coast of Cuba Reached Early in Afternoon

At 1:30 p. m., the plane was flying along the southwest coast of Cuba. Mrs. Lindbergh served a luncheon consisting of Mammoth sandwiches brought from Cozumel, supplemented with provisions which had been carried as emergency rations.

Both the colonel and his wife were in high spirits as they approached the end of the 9,000-mile flight around the Caribbean over the air routes of the Pan-American airways. Since September 20 they had visited 20 countries or colonies. The absence of formal ceremonies and big receptions was especially pleasing to them and afforded them the first opportunity in many months to lead a perfectly normal life.
