

CUBS' HITTERS START AT LAST

Athletics Trimmed 3-1 Upon Own Diamond Due to Cuyler, Hornsby

est in nine years of world's series play and astonishingly short of the expected figure of around 38,000 to 40,000. The big shortage was understood to be due to the refusal of the club gate tenders to accept paste boards that had gone through the hands of speculators and emerged without the regulation government tax stamping.

Even allowing for this situation, however, and the erection of big bleacher stands atop a row of houses outside the park, not many more than 30,000 fans actually viewed the proceedings in which their favorites went down to defeat. Ticket speculators, in any event, apparently took a terrific trimming while the enterprising resident owners of the housetop bleachers failed to have anything like a full house of customers willing to pay for a long view.

Game Not up to Expected Standards

The disappointingly small turnout in the face of much optimism and enthusiastic prospects, witnessed a ball game that also fell considerably short of the best world's series standards, a pitchers' tussle for the most part between Bush and Earnshaw, starting his second straight game as Connie Mack again handed a job to the experts. It was a contest of unusual breaks, colorless and uninspiring for the most part of the experts as well as the home crowds.

The Cubs won because they cashed in on their one big opportunity when Kiki Cuyler, with two out, two on base and the count two strikes and three balls, bounced the deciding hit over second base. It was a long time coming, but Cuyler, for the day at least, shared the winning laurels with Bush as he turned his first world's series feat of consequence since he drover over the winning run for Pittsburgh in the final game of the 1925 series against Walter Johnson.

Bush Gets Going

In sixth inning
Bush himself had started things rolling in the sixth, after the A's had blown themselves to a one run lead in the fifth. The Cub pitcher got a walk after a long session with Earnshaw, who was over-anxious to strike out his rival. McMillan fouled weakly but Elwood English was safe at first when Jimmy Dykes overran and fumbled his dribbling roller down the third base line. Hornsby had fanned twice previously, taking the third strike each time with the bat on his shoulders. When he came to bat in the pinch he had been raised unmercifully by the A's rooters. But this time he got the last laugh by slaming a single through short.

Bush galloped in under wraps. Hack Wilson, the only Cub to hit safely in the first four innings, came to bat with five successive safe blows behind him, but the best he could do was ground out to Bishop as the base runners advanced, English to third and Hornsby to second. Cuyler had a prolonged session with Earnshaw, fouling off several balls as the count went the limit, but he finally caught a curve and bounced it over second base to center, scoring what proved to be the deciding run.

Chicago Team Hardly There Rest of Game

Otherwise the Cubs were about as impotent at the plate as they had been in the first two games. They got only four hits, spread in as many innings outside the sixth.

The only other threat was in the second, when Hack Wilson opened with a tremendous drive to the extreme center field corner, a three base blow for the roly poly Hack but a home run for a faster man. Wilson was caught easily at the plate when he tried to score on Stephenson's grounder to Bishop.

Ten Cub strike outs gave Earnshaw a total of 17 victims in the one and a half games he was worked. His fast ball looked as good as it ever has and he had better control than usual when he fanned every man in the Cub lineup, except Wilson and Stephenson. The total was three less than the record the Cubs made against Elmske the first day and equalled in the second game but their aggregates of 36 for the three contests is now only eight short of the record of 44 made by the Giants of 1911, in six games against the Athletics.

Failure to Hit in Pinches Lame Game

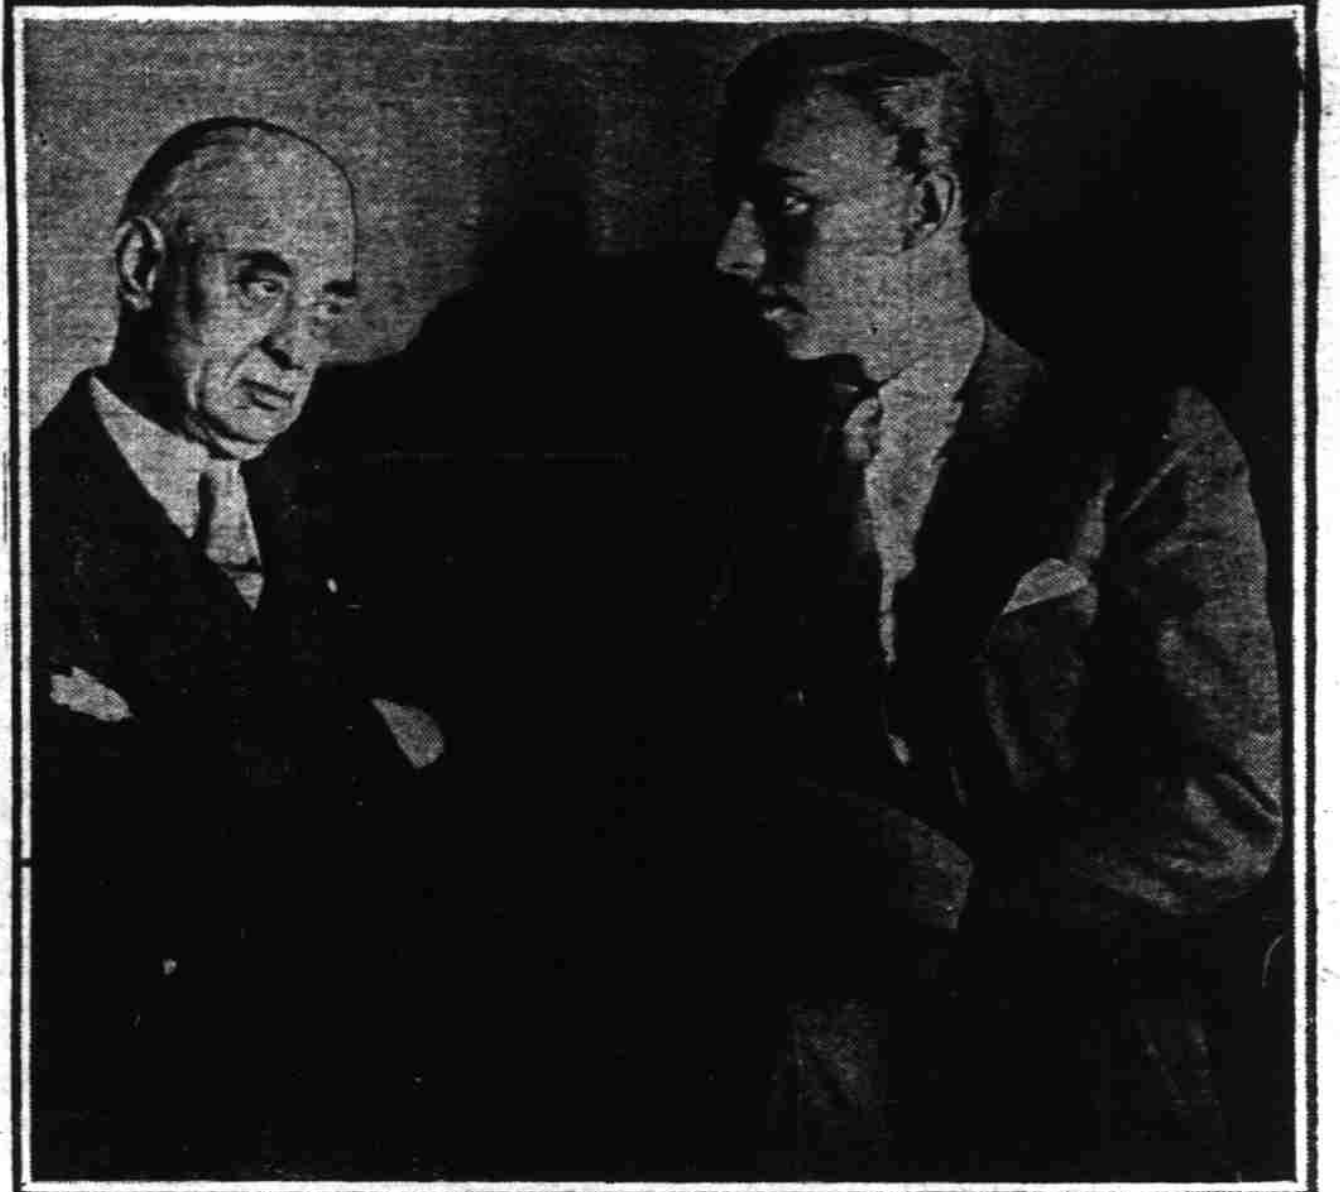

The A's lost chiefly because they could not hit Guy Bush in pinches. Ten runners, eight in the first four innings, were left on bases, as the American League champions failed to show any of their assurance of the previous two days at the plate. Jimmy Fox and Al Simmons, the two big guns, went hitless and when these two are not doing their usual stuff.

Mr. Pantages Facing Trial

there is not much to the attack of the A's.

The last and best chance the A's had to break through was in the seventh when Bishop singled, went to second on a wild pitch and Cochrane walked, after a fly out by Haas. Simmons tried hard but the best he could do was a long drive to deep center, a sacrifice fly that advanced the runners to second and third. Most any kind of a hit by Fox, the next man, would have tied the score but the kid first baseman and home run hero of the first two games had nothing in his bat but a weak bouncer in front of the plate that Taylor gobbled up for the third putout.

Athletics Go Strong

The A's threatened throughout the first four innings, got a bad break in the second when Jimmy Dykes had stolen home, only to find out that the third strike had just been put over on George Earnshaw for the final out. Umpire Charles Moran had called Dykes safe as he took advantage of Bush's long windup, raced home and beat the throw with a great slide but the arbiter immediately reversed himself by calling the third strike as the Cubs rushed out en masse to protest. This was the first time the great strategy of the House of Mack had gone awry. Somewhere the signals must have been mixed for the count was 2 and 2 when Dykes started home and the fact that Bush's toss was a strike defeated the spectacular maneuver.

Final score:
R. H. E.
Cubs 3 6 1
Athletics 1 9 1
Bush and Taylor; Earnshaw and Cochrane.

STOCK MART IS YET UNSETTLED

Much Churning About With But Little Progress Noted Friday

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—(AP)—The stock market churned about without getting anywhere today. Bulls found the reduction in brokerage loans gratifying, if smaller than expected, and rapidly bid up a number of volatile issues, but met with heavy liquidation. Closing prices were highly irregular, with gains and losses fairly evenly balanced.

As the market will be closed in observance of the legal holiday, Columbus Day, tomorrow, the weekend liquidation was heavy, and was swelled by disappointment in many quarters over the reduction of but $19,000,000 in loans, announced last night, and several brokerage houses advised to lighten commitments on rallies. Trading was but moderately active, 3,963,820 shares changing hands.

Montgomery Ward Boosts Dividend Rate

The day's news was largely favorable. Montgomery Ward increased its annual dividend rate from $2.50 to $3.

Copper statistics for September showed pleasing reductions in production and in stocks. The weekend trade and business reviews stated that retail trade was still being maintained at higher levels than a year ago, and indicated that the volume of general business was satisfactory, although comparison with a year ago produced several unfavorable showings, owing to the sharp upturn at that time.

Tobacco stocks were again in urgent demand, although it was announced that one large chain store system would not follow the recent advance in cigaret prices. American Tobacco Common and B. have reached new peaks with extreme gains of about 16 and 18 points and Liggett and Myers B. rose a couple of points to a new top.

Western Union Shows Increasing Strength

Continued strength in Western Union, which rose about 9 points to a new peak at 252, revived rumors on changes in capital structure. Anchor Cap rose 3 points to a new peak of further rumors with a merger with American Can, but the latter lost 3 points. Food Hares were strong, Hersey Chocolate, Cora Products and Cuyamel Fruit mounting to new high territory. Several of the rails were well bought, New Haven reaching a new record price at 127 1/2.

U. S. Steel sold up more than 2 points, then reacted, closing steady. Some of the high priced issues were highly buoyant, Auburn Auto rising 23 and Otis Elevator 18 points. Columbia Graphophone, Radi, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, and Fox Film "A" were strong spots. Kreuger and Toll was strong in response to reports of obtaining a match monopoly in Germany in return for a government loan.

Several soft spots appeared. Commercial Solvents losing 11 points, Standard Gas and Eastman Kodak 8, and such issues as American Banknote, Chrysler, General Motors, Kennecott Copper, National Biscuit, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, and Simmons, 1 to 4 points.
