

ATHLETICS PUT UP GAME FIGHT

Account of Ninth Inning Rally Reads Like Fiction Of Sport World

right hander, Pat Malone, in passing Jimmy Fox intentionally. It goes down as the $50,000 blow of the series, deciding the difference between the winners and the losers' share of the spoils.

Finish Most Dramatic Of World Series
The finishing rally was not as devastating as the ten-run splurge of the Mackmen in overcoming the Cubs Saturday but it was more dramatic because it settled the issue before the most distinguished fans of the land, Mr. and Mrs. Hoover, arriving ten minutes before the game with a large party including cabinet officers, stayed to the last out. They were on their feet, applauding as Haas, then Simmons and Miller struck the blows that suddenly converted the game from a prospective Cub victory to a wild triumph for the Athletics.

This was the big moment for the old master, Mack, as he saw his fighting young club slash through the gamest kind of a defense by the Cub, clinch the series by a margin of four games to one and give him his fourth world championship. Pat and a number of hard hit balls. It seemed, were combined to make safe what is now a world's record for the 67 year old leader of the Athletics. No other manager in baseball has ever won four world's series. This was Mack's fourth in six tries since 1905, adding 1929 to the other victories years of 1910, 1911, and 1915. John McGraw is the only other living man who has as many as three world's titles, the mark which the late Miller Huggins also attained with the Yankees.

Slimmest of Chances Converted Into Victory
There didn't seem more than the remotest chance for the Athletics to win today after they had been held to two hits for eight innings by the fast ball of big Pat Malone and after Wally French, pinch hitting for George (Rube) Walberg, in the ninth, had struck out. The Cubs had driven the hero of the first game, Howard Ehmke, out of the box in the fourth inning with a victorious attack, with two out, that produced two runs and what looked like a secure lead as Malone mowed down the Mackmen.

If it hadn't been for the memory of that "luck seventh" Saturday, the crowd might have given up hope entirely when French fanned. It wasn't in the cards for anything like that rally of the fourth game to be repeated and by the same team, but the Athletics of 1929, the world's champions now, are not beaten until the last man is out. Proved it today, if any proof was needed after the way they won two days ago and they proved that for sheer, raw courage in an emergency, they rank among the greatest of baseball champions.

Lineup Athletic Hope
Picture the ninth this afternoon: One man out, Pat Malone bearing down with a world of stuff, the Cubs on the alert to protect their somewhat slender lead, hoping rested entirely on the outcome, determined to let no lapses occur such as "blew" Saturday's game. French, another pinch hitting "bust" of the series, fanned, but Max Bishop brought the crowd to its feet with a slipping drive that flurried third base line all the way down. It was held to a single only by the fast work of Riggs Stephenson. George Haas was swinging his bat, perhaps the same one with which he belted his trick homer to center in Saturday's seventh, the drive that Hack Wilson lost in the sun. The third pitch came in, a "high hard" one a trifle inside. The crash was drowned out by the bedlam of shouting. The ball arched high. Kiki Cuyler backed to the wall but it was over the fence, over by a good margin as it dropped into Twentieth street and bounced on the porch of a house in the row which had 2,000 more howling fans on top.

Both Cross Platter
In a few moments, all of Malone's great pitching, all the fine defensive work of the Cubs had been offset. No run could take away any of the lustre of that wallop. It was a man sized home run and pandemonium was loose as Bishop and Haas trotted around the bases.
Mickey Cochrane grounded out to Hornsby for the second out, but Al Simmons, who led the big parade Saturday, again proved himself a great batter in the pinch. He smashed one to the scoreboard for two bases and the winning run was only a few strides from the plate. A cub strategy dictated an intentional pass to Jimmy Fox, despite the fact that Jimmy Fox, not done a thing all afternoon, hitting into two double plays as

Insult Falls to Arouse Resentment
Bing, if he felt any resentment over this implied reflection on his ability, stood nonchalantly at the plate as he let four go by, two balls and two strikes. Malone was pitching cautiously, working the corners, but Miller was now ready for business. The veteran outfielder swung on the next ball, a fast one waist high, and sent it on a line between Cuyler and Wilson. From the moment it left bat there was not the slightest doubt of its decisiveness. It was officially recorded as a two base hit but there was not even an attempt to make a play for Simmons, who almost had to fight his way through wildly excited team mates who rushed out to escort him in with the winning run.

With this flourishing finish, the Athletics once again lifted the American League banner to the peak for the third consecutive year, with a more dramatic if not quite as decisive a touch as did the Yankees in scoring their clean sweeps of 1927 and 1928. The National League has now lost 12 of the last 13 world's series games and must wait another year for any chance of revenge.

STEEPLECHASE IS FEATURE OF FILM

The first all-talking picture with a steeplechase race track as its major location is "The Hottentot," Harvey Threw's Vitaphone adaptation of the celebrated Mages-Collier stage comedy success and is the current attraction at Bligh's Capitol theatre, which will close its run Wednesday night.

Although essentially a comedy of characterization, "The Hottentot" has for its climactic scene a colorful classic of the turf in which a terrified and lovelorn "jockey" brings home the floral wreath of victory after a series of ludicrous mishaps over the course. The all-star cast includes Edward Everett Horton, Patsy Ruth Miller, Edmund Breeze, and many more notable screen and stage stars, Vitaphone vaudeville acts, and a Mack Sennett all talking comedy with the Fox Movietone will complete this program.
