Waggoner Gets Fifteen Years

A dazed, dejected man stood before Federal Judge Coleman and heard sentences passed on him—"Fifteen years in Atlanta." To the surprise of the court, the prosecution, the hundreds of spectators and even his own counsel, he had just admitted his guilt and insisted on putting himself on the mercy of the court. Charles D. Waggoner, fifty-six, head of the only bank in Telluride, Colo., financial adviser and custodian of the savings of the few thousand persons in that little town that had once flourished with two prosperous industries—mining and cattle—honored, trusted and held in good repute, now a numbered felon.

Newly Installed Water System and Neighbors Help Save Farm Home

PEDEE, October 15.—The completion of a fine water system the day before, was the principal means of saving the farm home and all out buildings of Rev. Womer, from destruction by fire recently.

Slashing on logged off lands, neighbors was being burned. When a brisk wind came up and carried burning pieces of bark and live coals over the hill and down on the buildings of Mr. Womer. The house caught on fire several times, the barn was fire four distinct times, the silo caught on fire, a large strawstack near the barn was on fire several times, besides the innumerable small grass fires.

Mr. Womer and the children were alone when the monster first threatened them, but neighbors rushed to the rescue and it was only by the hardest kind of work, vigilance, and an abundance of water that the buildings and contents were saved.

Every man in the Van den Bosch mill was there as well as neighbors, and men from Pedee. Men patrolled the roof of the barn, of the house, and all out buildings; men were in the hay mow with water and wet sacks; men were on the straw stack quickly extinguishing fires as soon as the burning embers fell, while others put out grass fires.

All this was possible only through the adequate supply of water held in the large reservoir, 500 feet above the farm home, on the mountain side.

Mr. Womer is driving a new car. Thirty pupils are now traveling on the school bus to Liberty.

Some of the young people of the C. E. attended the Marion county C. E. meeting at the first Christian church Sunday evening.
