CIRCUIT COURT CASE RETURNED

Judge Kelly of This County Among Those Reversed By Higher-Ups

The state supreme court Tuesday remanded for retrial in the Multnomah county circuit court the suit brought by Frank A. Heitkamp to enjoin E. W. Schmeer and others from constructing an apartment house in a residential district in which the plaintiff resides.

The suit originally was tried in the Multnomah county circuit court, where Schmeer and his associates prevailed. Appeal then was taken to the state supreme court, where the decree of the lower court was affirmed.

The plaintiffs subsequently petitioned for rehearing of the case in the supreme court, with the result that the court reversed its previous opinion on a technicality and remanded the action for retrial.

The opinion was written by Justice Belt.

Other opinions handed down Tuesday included:

City of Newberg, appellant, vs. Warren Construction company, et al; appeal from Yamhill county; motion to recall mandate allowed in opinion by Justice Belt.

Lillie Nadstanc, appellant, vs. G. B. Trask, administrator of estate of Susan S. Trask, deceased, respondent, and W. F. Follis and Gus Trask, defendants; appeal from Marion county. Suit to recover on promissory note. Opinion by Chief Justice Coshov. Judge Percy R. Kelly reversed.

COMMISSION FAILS TO ACT ON REQUEST

No action was taken by the state reclamation commission here Tuesday on the application of the Rogue River Valley irrigation district for authority to issue $210,000 bonds, but the commission disapproved certain parts of the plan submitted by the district for the purchase of the works of the Public Water company.

Among the items disapproved was $37,996.86 for the purchase of the canal system above the Hopkins lateral. The commission held that this apparently was included in the sold or unsold water rights. The commission also disapproved the proposal for a 10 per cent discount on bonds which the district desired to exchange for water right obligations at par.

The purchase plan covered the following items: For state right contracts, $85,602.42; principal and interest delinquent, $123,431; maintenance due and unpaid, $9181.52; water rights for 237.79 acres at $100 per acre; $23,779; water rights for 250 acres at $100 per acre, $25,000; purchase of canal system, $27,996.86; furniture, etc., $2799.16. Total $180,593.37.

The cost of organization was estimated at $12,000.

The district is in Jackson county.

Returning to Middle West—L. A. Kloek, who has spent the summer in Salem, left Tuesday morning for his home at Sioux Falls, S. D.

Portland School System Receives $6727 From U. S.

The Portland public schools, through the department of vocational education, has received $6727.02 as the final allotment of federal money from the state from the state board of vocational education, for the current year. DIVERSIFIED FARM IDEA IS SUCCESS

By MADALENE L. CALLIN
The possibilities of diversified farming in the Willamette valley are interestingly demonstrated in the A. R. Cadie farm at Rickreall.

Mr. Cadie has 600 acres, 200 in grain, 150 in clover and another 150 in clover and rape. An average of 600 feeders are fattened on the farm each year. Feeders are bought and fattened for the market.

Each winter 400 or 500 head of sheep are kept through the winter and in addition Mr. Cadie has 100 head of fine Lincoln sheep on the farm.

Crop yields were average this year, according to Mr. Cadie. His wheat averaged 40 bushels to the acre and barley 35 bushels. Clover seed ran 4 bushels to the acre.

Many of his neighbors have had trouble with poor yields of clover seed. The stand will look fine but the seed yield turn out a complete failure. According to Mr. Cadie, this is caused from a midge, similar to the red spider.

By clipping clover in May this trouble is overcome and a satisfactory seed yield is secured.

Judge Corkins To Take Place Of Hamilton

INSTRUCTION IN HEALTH IMPORTANT

work with the demonstration, now watches the physical well being of children of Englewood, Highland and senior high schools. Special Rooms Are Provided in Many Cases

In many of the schools special rooms have been provided for health work. Besides assisting the school physician with regular examination of children, one of the principal pieces of work done by the school nurse is guarding the school from contagion. This she does by excluding children from the schoolroom who are found to show symptoms of illness and through readmitting pupils. Students who have been absent from the city schools for more than three days on account of illness must always have a permit from the school nurse or doctor before they will be allowed to return to classes.

Just what this means to the schools may not at first be apparent, but such precautionary measures have been responsible for the fact that not one school room in the city has been closed down by contagion in the nearly five years that the demonstration has been operating. The saving in actual dollars and cents to the school district and to the individual family need not even be guessed at to bring the point home.

Diphtheria Detected in Early Stages
Several times the school nurse has discovered apparently well children whom she suspected of having diphtheria because examination showed a sore throat and temperature. Throat cultures showed those who harbored diphtheria. In each instance, the sick children were immediately excluded and an epidemic undoubtedly thereby averted.

Extent of health service in the Salem schools may be shown from a statistical summary carried through the several years of the work. In 1926, when endeavor in the schools here got under way, health examinations were given to 519 pupils and dental examinations were given to 319 boys and girls. Double the number of health examinations were given the next year and about half as many dental examinations. In 1928, dental inspections reached the starting figure of 5,358. For the first half of the present year, the dentist did more than half as much clinical work in Salem as in the previous year, and medical examinations numbered 1,487 in 1928.

Part of Health Work
An important part of the school health work, in Salem as in the rest of the county, has been immunization of school children. In the first year this was started, 1926, but 12 were vaccinated against smallpox. 31 took the toxin-antitoxin immunization against diphtheria, and 222 cultures were given. The next year, 1927, all these figures went way up, with smallpox vaccinations numbering 117, diphtheria immunizations 652 and cultures 302. Diphtheria immunizations reached 752 in 1928, smallpox, 453 and only 47 cultures were taken, showing that immunizations were proving effective. For the first six months of 1929, smallpox immunizations totalled 554 and diphtheria 440. Cultures were low again, at 54.

School nurses made 2,057 individual inspections in Salem in 1926; 6,934 in 1927; 5,116 in 1928; and 8,516 the first half of this year. Classroom talks with teachers in the third and a half school years totalled 190; conferences with teachers reached 6,647; children treated, 431; children excluded, 1,422; visits to school, 2,397; classes inspected, 539.

The appropriation is said to be in the form of an offer to the county making suitable arrangements to the federal government for its location and while the initial allotment for its maintenance is only $15,000 it is believed, by local business men and growers interested in the offer, that the appropriation will grow to a much larger amount with the increase in value in the county.

Telegrams are being sent to Senator McNary and the Oregon delegation at Washington, D. C., asking his support in bringing the experiment center to this county.

Bligh Reports Torrid Weather San Francisco

Hot weather in San Francisco and Los Angeles is reported by Frank Bligh, proprietor of the Capitol theatre who was at his desk again yesterday following a trip to California. The weather was warmer than it was a month ago, he found.

Mr. Bligh as president of the independent theatre owners organization of Oregon, attended a meeting of representatives of the independent houses to consider a proposition presented by the Tiffany-Stahl interests. Under the plan pictures would be obtained for the independent houses covering a five year period, the prices to be fixed by committees of producers and exhibitors.
