EXPLORERS ARE SAVED BY RADIO

Col. McAlpine and Group are Brought to Safety by Eskimo Party

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 4. — (AP)—Believed to have been found by wandering Eskimos called to the search by the voice of the radio, Col. C. D. H. McAlpine and his party of seven prospectors, who have been missing for eight weeks in the Arctic barrens, were safe tonight at Cambridge Bay away on the north-wardmost rim of Canada.

From Bathurst Inlet radio station, on the north coast—1,000 miles due north of Regina, Sask.—was flashed the search headquarters late this afternoon he follows message: "For James station, at Gjoahaven, King William Island, advised me 10 a. m., mountain time, that McAlpine party arrived safely at Cambridge Bay across the ice from Dease Point. Fort James will forward me instructions as soon as possible."

Colonel McAlpine, head of the expedition, and his party went into the north country on an aerial exploration trip. When they failed to return a widespread search was organized. For the last three weeks the base for the search had been at Bathurst Inlet. From there four airplanes had been vainly scouring the surrounding territory.

Persons familiar with the north country tonight speculated on how the news was sent out at Cambridge Bay. Permanently anchored at Cambridge Bay and frozen into the ice is the Maud, a ship which the explorer Amundsen had built with the idea of allowing it to freeze in, then float over the North Pole in the ice. The Maud now is at Cambridge Bay station and young Jack McKinnon, who hails from Vancouver, B. C., is living there.

At one time a first class radio set had been installed on the Maud. The set has been shut down, however, and the wireless operator now is away on a furlough. But young McKinnon is still on the job, and he has flashed awkward, amateurish messages when the occasion demanded to the Fort James, the Hudson's Bay company steamer now frozen in a tiny haven on King William Island, off the north side of Canada. The Fort James was mentioned in the radio message this afternoon. Some observers believed that from McKinnon, aboard the Maud, first news of the safety of the party was sent out.

From Cambridge Bay and King William Island the Hudson's Bay company sent out three weeks ago radio messages to Eskimos off the north coast that McAlpine and his party were believed to be marooned in that territory. Many of the north coast Eskimos have radio sets and understand English.

It is believed that Eskimos found the McAlpine party somewhere along the north coast, even where the airplanes were vainly hunting for them, and conducted them across the ice to Cambridge Bay.

Chrysanthemums Not in Danger From Frost Says Pickens at Club Session

Chrysanthemum growers have little to fear from frosts, popular opinion notwithstanding. K. H. Pickens, Salem grower and fancier, told members of the Salem Garden club at the club November meeting held last night in the chamber of commerce auditorium. Approximately 125 persons were in attendance, with interest throughout the meeting unusually high. Pickens said that more bulbs are dropped out than frozen out, and advised that bulbs be lifted on top of the group for the winter.

Other valuable pointers given by Pickens on raising and care of chrysanthemums, briefly put, included: Let plants grow about a foot high, then pinch off; the more times a plant is transplanted up to the first of June, the better; be sparing of water during the summer; fertilize early in September when the first bud appears; and prune back for larger blossoms.

A display of 13 varieties of flowers from the Beacon bulb farm, operated by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Baxter, attracted considerable attention, and particularly commented upon was the basket of Jersey Beauties, a similar exhibit of which took first prize at the state fair. Mr. and Mrs. Baxter have more than 200 varieties of this flower in their gardens.

Prizes for winner in the annual home beautification contest sponsored by the Garden club were awarded at last night's meeting, with high awards going to: Farm division—F. A. Doerfler, first; Paul Wallace, second; Mrs. G. H. Thompson, of near Macleay, third; city division—Dan Larmer, first; Mrs. William Ellis, second; F. W. Enow, 2495 Laurel avenue, third; R. G. Crowe, route eight, first; Robert Fitzmaurice, 710 Judson, second; Alice Palmer, route four, third; Mrs. Van Fleet, route four, fourth; Mrs. Van Patten, fifth.

Other awards in the city were made to: W. J. Hagedorn, 1105 Fir; Mrs. Fred Kirkwood, 1090 North Summer; Mrs. W. E. Burson, 155 Wilson; Carrie and W. G.
