Cupid in an Aeroplane

Elopers are old as time itself, but aeroplane elopers are more unusual than the common variety. Here is Florence Chappin, pretty Mount Clemens, Mich., miss, one of two girls who eloped with student flyers from Selfridge Field and flew to Chicago. They crashed twice—first at a forced landing just before reaching Chicago, and second when they crashed into custody of the police.

Persian Missionary Will Speak

The Missionary society of the First Presbyterian church has changed its regular date of meeting from Wednesday to Thursday for this week's meeting. This was done in order to make it possible for the members to meet and hear Miss Helen A. Clark, of the Presbyterian Girls' school in Resht, Persia, who is here now on furlough. Miss Clark is supported by the Presbyterian women of Oregon. She leaves within a few weeks for her school in Persia.

In addition to the interesting talk which will be given by Miss Clark, there will be vocal solos by Mrs. J. E. Fitzgerald, and Mrs. R. H. Robertson and a violin solo by Miss Jeanette Scott.

Willard Woman's Club Will Celebrate

WALDO HILLS—The Willard Women's club met at the home of Mrs. W. P. Emy Thursday. Mrs. Karl Haberly gave a paper on "Garden Making." "Color scheme in the Garden" was the subject of Mrs. P. W. PIONEER OF SALEM DIES AT AGE OF 75

Adam Ohmart, resident of Salem since 1875, died at his home a short distance south of Salem Tuesday morning at the age of 75 years and three months after a lingering illness of eight months duration. Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the Rigdon mortuary, under the direction of Darlow Johnson officiating.

Mr. Ohmart, pioneer of Ohio and Indiana. When he was 10 years old, his parents moved to Illinois when that state was being colonized and settled at Verdun about 30 miles south of the state capital, Springfield. Here he spent his boyhood until 1875 when he came to Oregon by way of San Francisco, reaching Portland by boat and from Portland to Salem by train. The terminal of the railroad was at the fairgrounds at that time.

Mr. Ohmart settled south of Salem and engaged in farming. On April 3, 1877, he was married to Velleda Smith, daughter of Fabritius and Virginia Smith, pioneers of 1846. Mr. and Mrs. Ohmart have since that time resided continuously south of Salem and for the past 30 years have lived in the home by Fabritius Smith on the crest of the hill just outside of the city limits on the Pacific highway. They celebrated their golden wedding there more than two years ago, on April 3, 1927.

Mr. Ohmart went into the Yukon territory with the Klondyke rush of 1898 with other Salemites who went at that time and returned twice afterward, spend most of 10 years in and near Dawson during the boom times of the gold "rush."

He joined the First Methodist church of this city when a young man and remained a member of same until recently when he transferred his membership to the Leslie Methodist church. Besides his widow, Velleda W., he is survived by three sons, Roy V., and Reynolds W., both of Salem, and one daughter, Lois Ohmart, of Salem. He also leaves five grandchildren, one brother, Dayle Ohmart, and a sister, Sophia Steele, both of Illinois.

Janet Young, Actress

By OLIVE M. DOAK

There is a little lady who has been coming to Salem now and again for the past seven years who has made herself a general favorite and yet perhaps with those who like her best there is not the slightest notion as to her personal appearance. They know her as Janet Young by name, a member of the Moroni Olsen players, and in appearance she is for them, perhaps, the character portrayed by her which they have liked best out of the many she has portrayed in Salem in the seven year period of their acquaintance with her.

In truth when she is "just Janet Young" she is a slim little lady, with very dark hair, almost curly and quite fluffy about her face, arranged in a loose coil some place near the crown of her head. Her eyes are dark and her face is placid and sensitively expressive. Her voice is the same singing, rich, timbered voice which has brought so much joy to her audiences.

There is one great difference between her stage appearance and her every-day life appearance—on the stage Miss Young speaks slowly and with leisure—the stage she talks rapidly, enunciating clearly but dashing along with a nervous energy which is also characteristic of her movements.

Attress Also Has Good Business Head

Another thing you would never suspect from the roles in which she has appeared and that is that she has a quick, definitely organized business sense. She is not only a clever actress but she is a clever business woman as well. As her about a tentative engagement for the company outside the regular booking and a clear cut, organized discussion of what the company would be able to do to win more-freshman party at the city hall Friday night. There were more than 37 present. Games formed the amusement until a late hour when refreshments were served.

Thought-Provoking Value of Plays Held Desirable

Enthusiasm and intelligent idealism marks Miss Young's attitude toward life. Said she in speaking of the moving picture productions and the legitimate stage art: "Plays, I think, should not be entertainment alone; there should be something about them to be thought-provoking. Now with the moving picture there is no time for thought. The tempo is wrong—there is just a flash and before the observer has time to really register what has been seen there is another vision thrust before him. Take the Ramsay MacDonald pictures which have been displayed. His trip to this country is one of the biggest things in history of recent years—when he was shown on the screen there was just a flash and that was all—no time to think of what he had done or would do in connection with his trip here—simply time to see outwardly and that briefly.

Lack of Thought Is Regarded as Dangerous

"In seeing so many moving pictures the public is developing a taste for a rapid tempo—an appeal to the eye only and there I think is a grave danger—we need to think as well as see, or rather think and see at the same time."

"Some one asked me if I would not soon be in 'talkies.' I can see if talkies were artistically done, and made thought provoking that they would be an attractive sideline. But one has to accept so much bad with the good now."

"The legitimate stage gives one time to think and compare. The tempo is better adjusted, but it is hard to make an audience appreciate the opportunity to think after having been accustomed to the rapidity of action in the moving picture."

Artistry and Sincerity Among Chief Features

In speaking of the plays chosen by the Moroni Olsen players Miss Young said the aim of the company was to "do a thing of merit, and to do it artistically and sincerely." This they have done continuously, refusing at all times to do plays below their standard. It is their work to perpetuate plays that are good and this very ideal has held the group together for the seven years under which they have been known as the Moroni Olsen players, and for much longer than that. Many of the members of the cast have been playing together under various managers for a long time.

Moroni Olsen, Byron Foulger and Miss Young were with Maurice Browne in Seattle as far back as 1920 when Browne was struggling to maintain his standard of doing "only good things whether the public liked it or not." Browne is the man who went to London after starving for his art here. There he starved, also, for a while until one night he was brought a manuscript in which he saw worth—others had discarded it. He set to work on it and now it is the famous "Journeys End" and there are 23 companies playing it and Browne is a wealthy man who kept his ideal and remained true to his belief in the appeal of pure beauty. There is a strong bond between Moroni Olsen players and Browne.

Efforts to Get Crowd Disapproved

Miss Young spoke with enthusiasm of the many civic organizations which had been aided by their productions. "But," said she, "we never like to go into a small town where the burden of getting an audience is too hard for the organization backing us. Not unless they insist will contracts be made for such places. It is better to build slowly and solidly than force our way into smaller places where discouragement might come in trying to undertake the responsibility of the type of play we present."

The plan of building seems to be successful for the first year the company started 15 towns were played with five plays given during the year. Now 30 towns are played and only three plays are given with such as Shakespear, Shaw, Ibsen, O'Neil, Galsworthy and many more forming the repertory of playwrights presented. The number of plays to be presented was lessened in order that more justice could be done to each.

Attress Has Had Real Career Upon Stage

Miss Young has not only played under Maurice Browne, but Broadway lights have shown on her head at which time she was with Margaret Anglin and was later with her in Berkeley; she has played in New Zealand, in Australia, in Canada beside her work in the west.

"Do I like Oregon? How could I help it? I went to high school and college in Oregon—it is my home; I think one always feels differently about the places one goes to school. Such places always mean more, just as a few people meet during school years stand head and shoulders above all the others one will ever know. Such a person in my school days is J. S. Landers who taught me the first public speaking I ever had. That was in The Dalles. Mr. Landers is now president of the Oregon Normal school. Miss Young's fine admiration for him is indicative of another trait which her audiences cannot see—her appreciation of the good in them.

Perhaps that is the key to her delightful interpretations on the stage.

West Salem

Mrs. S. C. Hess of Portland came Saturday to West Salem to visit her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hess of home avenue. She will return to her home Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Bone and three children of Oak Grove were Sunday and Monday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. McNeil of Third street. They came to honor little Bobby McNeil's fifth birthday which was Sunday.

A miscellaneous shower was given Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Yantis and Mrs. Glenn L. Adams, bringing Mrs. Aleck Taylor of Portland. Mrs. Taylor formerly resided here. At the shower she received a large number of beautiful gifts.

The reception rooms were beautifully decorated with tall vases and baskets of chrysanthemums. At a late hour Mrs. Yantis and Mrs. Adams served a two course luncheon.

Those hidden to be present were Mesdames William Hacker, Rollin Beaver, Bernard Benson, James B. Smith, Robert A. Stevens, Aleck Taylor, Avery L. Applewhite, James P. Smart, Wallace Barnes of Jefferson Way, Glenn L. Adams and John A. Yantis.
