County Chairman of County's Seal Sale Gives Out Statement

With the annual Red Cross roll call now in progress and some misunderstandings apparent over the agreement between the Red Cross and the national tuberculosis association and their respective holiday campaigns the following statement is issued from the office of Miss Mary Fake, county chairman of the seal sale:

"An agreement by the National Tuberculosis Association and the American Red Cross has been entered concerning the Christmas seal sale and the annual Red Cross roll call. Despite the different types of service these two organizations render, the similarity of the means of finance employed by them has led to some misunderstanding of the purposes and methods of each.

"The American Red Cross roll call ends on Thanksgiving day; the sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals will not begin until Thanksgiving day and will close Christmas day.

"Christmas seals are sold each year to finance the educational and relief program of the tuberculosis association. How is the money spent? Five per cent of each dollar goes to the national association headquarters in New York, from which all plans for the country emanate; 35 per cent of each dollar goes to the Oregon Tuberculosis association with headquarters in Portland and of which Mrs. Saldie Orr Dunbar is executive secretary. Health programs for school children and others are planned there, and an enlightenment on the prevention of tuberculosis is carried out, the death rates become steadily lower. Nurses are sent by the state association into counties where there is no public health nurse.

"Sixty per cent of each dollar is kept by the Marion county public health association, provided nine seals per capita are sold. In Marion county, a program of nursing service to those who have tuberculosis in their homes and an educational program on hygiene and care in prevention of the disease is being carried out. The county association must rely upon the seal sale to carry on this work. It is the only means of finance and great effort is being made this year for high standards of service. The communities throughout the county have each accepted a part in the seal sale and the workers are getting ready for it."

Work on the group of new state penitentiary buildings is progressing rapidly, and it was announced Saturday that the administration structure probably will be finished and ready for occupancy shortly after January 1.

Other improvements included in the group are a two-story garage at the main prison, two bars at the penitentiary annex, and remodeling of the dormitory formerly used by the inmates of the state training school for boys. The cost of these improvements will aggregate approximately $81,000. The low cost of the improvements was due to the use of the prison labor and purchase of materials in wholesale lots.

The dormitory will be four stories high, of concrete construction, and with sufficient space to accommodate the prison office and provide quarters for the women prisoners. There also will be cells for some of the men inmates. The administration building is being constructed flush with the west gate of the prison, which will allow the elimination of one guard post and make access to the institution more safe than at the present time. Officials said the building would have been farther advanced had it not been necessary to take a large number of men off the job and place them in the flax plant during the summer rush.

The two-story garage will provide cells for approximately 150 prisoners, as well as furnish ample space for the prison automobiles and trucks. Prior to the present administration many of the trucks were allowed to stand outside during the winter months. It is likely that most of the cells on the second floor of the new garage will be occupied by trusty prisoners. These cells will be large and comfortable and will be provided with sanitary conveniences.

At the request of Governor Patterson the 1929 legislature enacted a law making it possible for the penitentiary to take over the old boys' training school which was abandoned when the new boys' institution was completed near Woodburn. Operations at the old boys' school, which is now known as the state penitentiary annex, include the erection of two dairy and horse barns and remodeling of the dormitory. Trusty prisoners have been transferred to the annex, and virtually all of the state land there is under cultivation.

With the completion of the administration building and two-story garage at the main prison, the present congested conditions in the penitentiary will be relieved. There are now nearly 800 prisoners in the main building, despite that the normal capacity is less than 600. Because of the crowded conditions it has been necessary to place two men in most of the cells and provide sleeping accommodations in the barber shop, commissary and prison hospital. Officials said this is a dangerous practice, and has a tendency to demoralize the morale of any penal institution.

At the time Governor Patterson went before the legislature and urged an appropriation to make a number of improvements at the prison annex, he had in mind a plan to segregate the inmates. It was his proposal when first term men convicted of minor offenses be sent to the annex, where they would work out of doors and under healthy conditions. The suggestion of the governor will be carried out as far as possible, prison officials said.

When the new group of buildings are completed the women prisoners will have adequate and comfortable quarters in the administration structure. Provisions also will be made to give them employment. At the present time the women have no work, other than domestic duties.

The new industrial building at the Oregon state hospital has been completed at a cost of between $65,000 and $70,000. An interesting feature in connection with the new industrial building is a swimming pool, which was constructed when Harry Lane was superintendent of the hospital. This pool, which was covered with a floor, and not used in recent years, will now be made available for patients. It also will serve for fire protection.

In erecting and equipping the new industrial building all line shafts have been eliminated and power will be provided by individual motors. One of the busiest departments in the building is the machine shops which occupy a space 30 by 76 feet. Other departments are the carpenter shop, tin shop, mattress factory, leather shop, canning rooms, basket weaving shop and sewing department.

Another state building completed recently is the new home for nurses and attendants at the state hospital.

Englewood

(The following news from Englewood school was received in the office too late for Sunday's papers.)

Miss Madeline Heckman's 3A and 4B class has completed an attractive sandtable illustrating the city of Bagdad. The minarets, mosques, and bazars filled with jewels and rugs, and houses with their overhanging balconies are very realistic. On the rivers are kooftahs and keleks along with a large and comfortable and will be provided with sanitary conveniences.

There are shepherds tending their flocks, oxen drawing water for irrigation, and camels laden with precious burdens. In the distance one sees the ruins of an ancient city. The dusky Arabs populating the city are dyed clothespins dressed richly in real silks.

Miss Ella Deyoe's 8B class has a fine display of corn and corn products and wheat and wheat products.

Among the interesting events in Mrs. Forkner's 1A and 2B room was the arrival at school of a canary which the children named Tiny. She was brought by James Garson, Jr., of the 2B class and has been enrolled as a citizen of that group. She has furnished much interesting material for reading and language. To the delight of the children she has built a nest and laid two small blue eggs in it. The children are eagerly looking forward to the coming of the little birds.

Goose frightens child to death by fierce attack

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 18 —(AP)—The terrifying spectacle of a goose, attacking with bill and flapping wings, caused 3-year-old Priscilla, daughter of John Shivock, of Lorain, to die of fright today.

The child, playing in the yard of a farm house at Herlin Heights, east of here, thought the curious looking bird something worth investigating. As she ran towards it the goose turned, pounced upon her and hit her.

The injuries were slight, according to A. R. Grierson, coroner, who gave the verdict.

West Salem

Mrs. Calvin Thomas and daughter, Marguerite of Hood River were Thursday evening visitors with Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Thomas, of Ruge street. They are now visiting other relatives in Salem. They returned Saturday night to the Thomas home to spend the night, and they planned on going to Hillsboro Sunday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Thomas.

Mrs. L. E. Davis and Mrs. W. F. Thomas were Saturday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Thomas of 1383 Edgewater street.

The young folk of West Salem have purchased a volley ball and net with the money gained by the pie social recently held in the church basement. The evenings have been taken up for practice when the Community hall has not been in use.

Miss Doris Hamby and Miss Violet Wallace will sing a special number at the Sunday evening service. Their singing is enjoyed by the many people who have heard them. Everyone is cordially invited to come and take part in the services. There will be special music also at the morning service.

The Ladies' Aid Silver Tea will meet Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Fred Gilson on Kingwood avenue. All ladies of West Salem are invited to attend. The laying of the cement at the Lewis Service Station in West Salem is progressing. They are only putting in a section at a time.

Quite a large crowd of young people of the Epworth League attended Saturday, the state convention at Sunnyside M. E. church, of Portland. Also, a large number of the other church people expect to attend the meeting of the board of foreign missions at the First Methodist
