Yates Back in Jail—Louis Yates, sentenced to serve three months in the county jail here last spring for failure to pay an allowance for his wife for the support of a minor child, was brought back to the county jail yesterday from Portland to serve another three months' stretch. According to the sheriff's office, the man must serve three months and is then released for three months during which time he is required to give a certain portion of his earnings to the support of the child. Should this requirement be not fulfilled, the man is to be resented for another three months, the same procedure to be effected each time. The mother of the child is now married, it was learned yesterday, and the man declares he cannot see the reason for his paying the money to the woman.

Editors to Speak—Editors of three outstanding Methodist publications will be the speakers at the Salem Rotary club luncheon today. They are Dan B. Brummett, editor of the Northwest Christian Advocate, whose home is in Chicago; W. E. J. Gratz, editor of the Epworth Herald, also of Chicago, and Dr. James R. Joy, of the Christian Advocate, from New York. They have been attending the annual meeting of the board of missions of the Methodist Episcopal church in Portland. They will be introduced by Dr. John M. Canse, president of Kimball School of Theology.
