George Ball Place Found One of Most Interesting In Whole Valley District

By MADALENE L. CALLIN

I had left the village of Ballston and was following the market road leading toward McMinnville. "Turn here," said my guide and the little green roadster obediently turned. We followed a narrow lane leading west and then saw a picture that might have been a model for a painting in some old English gallery.

A low white house, sheltered on the north by towering trees, was surrounded by a mass of flowers of every color and variety. I later found that the house was of brick and had been boarded over and painted white. The inside was as interesting as the exterior. A wide stone fireplace and several pieces of antique furniture that would delight any collector, completed the picture which the outside of the house had made.

This place, which is now the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Ball, is one of the very prosperous farms of the valley. Prunes, hops, Jersey cows, chickens and hay and grain are only a few of the sources of revenue on this farm.

Mrs. Ball who is a great lover of flowers, is responsible for the beauty of the flower garden. No particular plan is followed in the plantings and they are not arranged in any geometrical pattern but the resulting whole is most attractive. The house, which was built in 1852 by Isaac Ball, is an excellent background for the many flowers.

At the south of the house is the kitchen garden and here we find the same profusion as in the flowers. Mrs. Ball won the prize at the recent Polk county fair for her pappers and they were the largest that I have ever seen. Out of curiosity I measured one. It was 15 inches one way and 13 inches the other.

Another pride of Mrs. Ball is her Lakenvelder chickens. These are of the German strain and she

WOODBURN, November 22.—(Special)—The sophomore class of Woodburn high school presented the Thanksgiving program before the assembly Wednesday afternoon before school closed for the holidays.

The program was in charge of Bill Darby, president of the class, and opened with "America the Beautiful" by the assembly followed by a march by the high school band. "Say Something Good" was the inspirational reading given by Doris Pendleton and a trio composed of Edith Shrock, Opal Dickey, and Margaret Rich sang "Thanksgiving Song." Elizabeth Miller, accompanist. Rev. Glenn S. Hartong, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church was the speaker of the afternoon and gave an appropriate talk. "Stars and Stripes Forever" and "College Boy," two of the school songs were sung by the students, accompanied by the band.

ERADICATION OF DISEASE CITED

State Board of Health Gives Out Bulletin Dealing With Subject

Benefits given in eradication of disease as a result of the annual Christmas seal sale are told in the current publication of the state board of health, contents of which follow:

Sufficient funds directed toward the prevention of disease in any county will bring returns in increased industrial efficiency, domestic harmony and community progress through freedom from epidemics, and ability to meet every-day demands of endurance and energy. The returns will be directly in proportion to the care used in the selection of the results to be obtained and the amount of money invested. This claim is based upon the combined experience of scientifically administered programs that have been placed under the microscope of scientific analysis.

One of the agencies serving as the salesman of Christmas seals is the National Tuberculosis association and its 1500 affiliated state and county associations. The price it asks for the commodity it has to sell—health, is your conscientious guarding of your personal health, the health of your family and of your community. Its legal tender is the Christmas Seal. The annual sale of the Tuberculosis Christmas Seal is the sole source of revenue of the Oregon Tuberculosis association and of its 20 affiliated county public health associations.

The indirect benefits which have resulted from the campaign against tuberculosis are among the most interesting things in the history of the disease. Because it was so dreaded and claimed so many young persons it was possible to interest the community in

HALIBUT BOAT IS WRECKED ON COAST

SEATTLE, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Wreck of the halibut boat, Seabird, of Seattle with the loss of two lives was reported to coast guard officers here today by the cutter Unalga, which located the battered vessel on Wingate island, near Prince William sound, southeastern Alaska, late today.

The dead were Louis Dyb and Ellis Dyb, who were drowned. Alfred Oyb was injured. The men were not related. It was reported. Four other members of the crew were taken off uninjured by the Unalga, which then proceeded to the mouth of Copper river where another wreck was reported. It was believed this second vessel might be the halibut boat Kanatak, which has been missing since November 11.
