

Kimball School to Seek Financial Backing to Run Institution Through Year

(Ed. Note: The Kimball School of Theology which is located in Salem on the Willamette university campus is making its annual appeal to local citizens for financial support. The following editorial article reviews the work of the school and the reason for support in its appeal for funds.)

Kimball School, one of the fine educational institutions of this capital city, stands well with the patrons of higher education throughout the entire Pacific Northwest. For the last three years the Puget Sound annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal church and the Columbia river conference have intensified their interest and have given increasing support. They see, as do the friends in Oregon, the need of standardizing the education of the ministry and directors of religious education. These two conferences, uniting in their last session, have merged under the name of the Pacific Northwest conference. In their educational report they say:

"In two years Kimball School of Theology will have come to the 25th anniversary of its founding. This event should be commemorated by some adequate program of advance."

But the Oregon conference, mother of the school, never fails to reaffirm her confidence in this ministerial training school, as appears in the last bulletin of Kimball. Also the laymen who may see even more clearly the need of educated ministry, never fail to vote their appreciation and support whenever given opportunity. President Canse and the faculty members are delighted to report that the senior class this year exceeds the number in any previous class, who will receive the degrees of the institution. There are nine in the senior class and at least three will also receive a degree of master of arts in religious education. Including the part-time students from Willamette university, fifty students are now taking work at Kimball school.

There seems to be a marked improvement in the spirit of the student body. This is partly due to the higher scholastic standing required and partly from dormitory privileges that have been installed. For the last two years the third story of the building has been utilized for housing the student ministers during the school days of the week. Together with the dormitory accommodations, the basement is equipped for simple kitchen and dining room accommodations, taken care of by the students themselves. In this way they make a substantial saving in their school expenses.

There is a notable improvement in the relation that theological students sustain in the communities where the schools operate, in the last few years. With the more scientific and practical studies which have to do with Bible interpretation, church administration, directing religious education in the Sunday school and social relationships in general a new atmosphere has been created. Twenty-five years ago theologians were not supposed to show any interest in athletics, but it is very well known in Salem that the Kimball faculty and students make a good account of themselves in various forms of physical exercise. This year the volleyball team is accomplishing some interesting demonstrations. This human touch is evidently highly appreciated by the business and professional people of Salem.

An intensive campaign is being planned for the city of Salem, to put the support of the school squarely before the business men, with the hope of materially increasing the number of supporting friends. There is need for a substantial increase in the number of contributors. Certain supporting friends who are giving liberally believe that the total number could or should be doubled. After careful investigation of the demands made by other organizations of the city asking local support, with conferences with those in position to give good advice, it has been decided to put forward an intensive campaign for Kimball School the first part of December. When Dr. Kimball began the school the total budget was at a low minimum. But with the larger program of today and the greatly increased cost of operation, it becomes absolutely necessary that there shall be a much more liberal local patronage. The total budget stands at about $18,000 and from the benefits of the school to the local city it would seem that $5,000 would be a very moderate sum to be raised here.

The management of the school has received some very generous commendations of the type of work being done, the character of the student body and the desirability of extending the school program so as to provide for a larger future. It would seem that now is the time for a definite advance in this support.

Most of the 250 pound cargo of mail the plane carried was damaged but only about one per cent was totally destroyed. Postmaster John M. Jones of Portland announced. Puget Sound mail suffered the heaviest damage, he said, but most of it will be re-developed and forwarded.

ARTICHOKES HELD LARGE CROP HERE

Jerusalem artichokes are coming to be an important crop in Oregon and in the Grand Island district where the harvest has just been completed. A crop shortage in California has caused an increased demand for the Oregon product which is said by buyers to be of excellent quality.

Dale Fowler of Grand Island had one and one third acres from which he harvested 17 tons; from one and two-fifth acres on the Clarence Rockhill farm 14 and one half tons were produced; John Shellburn grew 25 and one-fifth tons on two acres.

The tubers are sold to the Pabst Dietary company and are dried and made into soup. The artichokes have been found to be particularly suited to the diet of diabetics and the demand is increasing steadily. The company has contracted for the planting of 500 acres near Hermiston and is negotiating for the lease of a dehydrating plant at The Dalles.

This will take care of the central and eastern Oregon crop and so far the local crop has been shipped directly to the factory at Santa Rosa, California. There is, however, a dehydrating plant at McMinnville prepared to take care of the crop and should the acreage be materially increased next year local plants will undoubtedly be used to handle the artichokes.

To the Kings Taste!

Once upon a time there was a certain king who had a reputation for being "one hard cuss" when it came to his victuals.

The royal chef sure had his hands full trying to please H. R. H. The King would turn up his royal nose as each new "tempter" was presented. Finally chef tried doughnuts... "Voila," cried the King. "Voila, my eye," replied the chef, "they're doughnuts."

Folks today are cheering our doughnuts too... and we invite you to discover the reason for their tremendous popularity.

Made by an entirely new, automatic process... and they're just teeming with goodness and nutrition... done, to the king's taste... a gorgeous golden brown.

The Market Self-Selecting Store

Marion St. at Commercial

This message to those who have not yet visited this department.

Through the years business, like water, seeks and finds its level.

For years before the advent of the cash store and mail order houses, there was a level of prices established that could not be lowered by that method of selling. Only by changing methods were the cash stores able to sell at lower prices. Reduced cost of operating of course reduced selling prices.

Now after about fifteen years cash store prices have advanced along with operating overhead until cash store prices have reached a high level of prices that can not be reduced by present operating methods.

Cash store operators, like all other people, are vain; they want to appear large and to do so have spared no expense to be known as the largest in the country. Great warehouses in high rent districts, high salaried men added to the foremen of ability to be sure—but to make a showing they added this and that to operating cost until today a higher level of prices is necessary to exist.

A NEW TYPE STORE

Busick's Self-Selecting store in the new market building has cut operating cost in half. Twenty or more people can be served at the same time with only one man in attendance, where it would require ten men in the other type of cash store, and more than that, rent is cut in half. No water, light, telephone or heating expense; no interest on bonds or stock issues; no high-salaried officers to pay.

In this store we are offering you foods based upon this low overhead, and you profit just as surely as we do.
