Young Rabbit Is Terror to All Dogs On Clark Farm

AUBURN, Dec. 3.—"Jack Dempsey," a young Chinchilla buck, is growing to be quite an attraction at the "Ross B. Clark Pure Bred Chinchilla Rabbitry." However he is very unpopular with Queen and Patsy, Clark's English setters, and any visiting dogs, both large and small.

Dempsey, who is given the freedom of the yards, gives the dogs but little peace. Spying them on the porch or in the yards, he will make for them with flying bounds, often springing upon their backs and baring his toenails and teeth into the dogs' flesh, or rolling over on his back, will bite and chew with swift, sure strokes.

When the dogs succeed in freeing themselves, and give the rabbit a severe shaking, it only serves to increase his rage, and the dogs seek refuge in the truck. It is often necessary to pull the rabbit off to save the dogs from being fatally injured by the slashes of his cruel claws.

Several very incredulous dog owners have brought their dogs out, and found that "seeing is believing," Clark says. "If you don't believe it, come and see."
