

WRAPS SHOW FITTED LINES

Ermine Expensive but There Are Other Furs in Impressive Designs

Of course the fairy princess wrap of white ermine—an original by Lelong—is illustrated just to show how bewitching the fur coat can be as a gift. Not many of us can hope to find such a regal contribution in the Christmas stockings. But we can dream about it, imagine ourselves in other latest models, and who knows—if he sees it, someone else may be so inspired by its grandeur that he will walk right out and order it duplicated in less costly fur.

Among the fashionable coat furs he will find that for the dresser models and more flexible furs are used, and many are slightly shaped and flared to conform somewhat to the princess lines featured in formal and afternoon gowns.

Gaiyak, which is pressed caracul, is used for both dress and sports coats, the formal designs being trimmed with luxurious furs such as pointed fox, grey fox, lynx or badger. Gaiyak comes in natural, grey, black, beige, tan and platinum tones, and is also used for scarves, muffs, pocket-book-muffs and hats.

Another dressy coat fur is moire broadtail, a pressed fur which simulates the way design of moire. In grey, black, beige and brown these flexible skins of

The South American lamb are offered.

Lapin, the outstanding new fur of the season, is featured for all manner of coats—evening wraps, dress coats, formal tailcoats, sports coats and also for scarves, muffs and hats. Somewhat like beaver, only softer and more flexible, it is rarely combined with other furs. Chic sports models of this fur, of grey kid, gaiyak and goat skin come in finger-length, three-quarters or full length types—perhaps the smartest being the shorter coats, which are designed for wear with wool frocks in harmony. Raccoon, the former sports favorite, this year appears more frequently as trimming than it does in the usual cumbersome coat.

SMART ENSEMBLES FOR MEN FEATURED

The Navy and Scarlet of the Guards, which for years have had a steady vogue in a certain group of Eastern society sportsmen, have been adopted by one leading men's shop as the basis of a smart ensemble. Included are: The Guards Robe, a type suitable for use in the man's locker room; in blue flannel trimmed with red. The Regimental tie, patterned after the type worn by all officers of the British Guards from the Prince of Wales himself on down to the youngest "leftenant." Guard's pajamas in blue broadcloth with red trimming. English officer's suspenders in Guards colors. Slippers of fine blue calf, lined with red. Imported ribbed wool hose (light weight) in Guard's blue with smart red clocking.

For those who do not care for the contrast of red with blue there is the new vogue for different shades of blue. Ensembles in this group contain a charming assortment in the Wedgwood Blue that is preferred by London's well dressed men.

Included are: A fine flannel robe in two tones of blue; two pajamas, one of plain blue in two tones, the other a figured pattern; two French back shorts, one of white Oxford cloth with thin blue stripes; the other of blue with white striping. Two pairs of imported life socks, one in medium, the other in darker Wedgwood blue. Soft blue kid mules in harmony with the flannel robe.

Cocktail Forks In New Designs

The newest things in this direction are fruit forks to go with a cocktail set. These are of glass, shaped like a pencil with a sharp point, at the top of which is perched a tiny chicken, dog, cat or bird. And these come in gay colors to match any set.

Lights Add Gaiety When Christmas Carols Sung; Suggestions Are Given

Shortly after dark on Christmas Eve a button will be pressed in Washington which will light the Presidential Tree situated in Sherman Square. This will be a signal for the lighting of all other municipal outdoor trees throughout the country. Similarly, it will be a signal for the general lighting of trees and premises of private homes in every town and city where outdoor decorative lighting is featured as a part of the Christmas festivities. And so captivating is the result of exterior lighting that it is hard to believe it can be so easily accomplished. Tiny lights and larger lights with their Christmas-colored bulbs come already strung, ready to be hung wherever fancy directs. There are types that burn steadily, other types that flash the lights off and on—and if one is the least bit handy, marvelous star and wreath and Fairy Land formations can be fashioned by twining strings of lights about wire or cardboard frames of different patterns.

A few simple suggestions which give very colorful Christmas effects are:

1. Substitute a red lamp for the usual one in the entrance fixture—and put a wreath around it.

The lighting sets are sturdy little devices, too, and can be packed away and used again, year after year. The bulbs are made of very low wattage, so they consume an insignificant amount of electricity. Once you have placed them where you thing they will be most effective, all that remains to be done is to connect them with an electric outlet. If you have an exterior outlet, so much the better—but it costs very little to have such an outlet installed, in case you are not so fortunate. Or you may simply run your connecting wire through a window—and block up the crack with paper or cloth, if you won't leave even a

2. Place electric candles in Christmas wreaths in the windows.
3. Run colored lights through trees and shrubbery on your grounds.
4. Set Christmas trees in tubs in the yard and trim them with strings of colored lights.
5. Run strings of colored lights along the veranda, or festoon strings of them along the eaves of the house.
6. Place colored lights in flower boxes.
7. Twine colored lights in wreaths or garlands and hang them in windows or festoon them against the outside of the house.
8. Mount illuminated stars over the door or on the roof of the house.
9. Illuminate Christmas trees, both those used indoors and those in the yard, with strings of tiny electric lights.
10. Place colored lights, one red and one green, in twin sockets and place in windows.
11. Hang illuminated Christmas bells in entry windows.
12. And—if the thermometer stands at freezing—try this for the outdoor Christmas tree: Sprinkle the tree with water and when it freezes, twine colored lights in and out of branches. You will have the most gorgeous Fairy tree for miles around.

Mirror as Gift Reflects Gaiety

"Little mirror on the wall"—or big mirror, long or oval mirror—each one, with all it might, reflects back whatever beauty, and interest, and motion comes its way. A mirror is a sort of magic picture, changing according to the light and objects seen in it, at different angles.

It also gives an impression of added spaciousness to a room, because of the vistas created by its reflections.

A small mirror makes a gay little, good little gift for one who unties its red ribbons and white wrappings. A larger one, destined to be placed on an important wall-space, will be a Christmas present to the whole family, in the joy it will bring.

KING DEPICTED AS MOST IDEAL LOVER

By BATES RANEY

(Associated Press Staff Writer)
LONDON (AP)—King Alfonso of Spain appears in the role of a perfect lover in the new life story of Queen Victoria of Spain just published. Evelyn Graham, the author, journeyed to the royal palace at Madrid and got much of his material from the Queen's own lips.

She told how when she was visiting her future husband at San Sebastian she showed a fondness for the luscious oranges sent especially for the royal table. Later she left for France and the King telegraphed the Spanish embassy in Paris to have someone meet a train by which he was sending some oranges for the Princess.

An official was despatched with baskets large enough to hold a generous consignment, but his astonishment was great when he saw lifted, from the train a full-sized orange tree in a tub, its branches laden with golden fruit.

During the engagement the Spanish King wrote his English princess every day in French, sometimes, it is revealed, twice a day.

King Alfonso, while still in his teens, is said to have declared that he would marry only a princess who took his fancy. "I want to love my wife," he said, and his marriage is evidence that he carried out his resolution.

When Princess Victoria became the Queen of Spain she was faced with the problem of the mantilla. There are thirteen ways of wearing the mantilla and the Queen had several lessons in arranging the folds of lace. She learned the are so well that one of the things which has most endeared her to the people was the grace with which she wore the national head-dress and her fondness for it.
