how to make a man cheer-y at Christmas to solve this matter, we called a conference . . . a grim, bespectacled scientist figured it out . . . the conference dissolved—and here is his opinion the gift must be practical—man, you know, thinks he has a practical mind, so he insists the gift be something he will use.

but something he wouldn't buy for himself . . . that is, it must be better than the ordinary. Such a gift will almost start him purring.

it must be personal . . . all for himself, for his own use—your thoughtfulness in this matter will endure and endear—and it must be good looking . . . something that will assuage all his secret desires for the smartest things to be had.

so it was with this great understanding that we selected, rejected, and gathered together all the fine things that we have.

neckwear in new smart patterns, $1.00 to $5.00.

handkerchiefs, initialed, colored borders or minus either $35 to $1.50.

silk dressing gowns, with fancy patterns, linings or neither, $18.50 to $25.

pajamas with blazer stripes, $5.00, others $2.50 to $7.50.

smart shirts with collars attached, collars to match or without 'em, $2.50 to $8.00.

house slippers with cushion soles, and fancy colored uppers—$2.50 to $5.00.

fine sweaters with or without hose to match . . . the sweaters $5.00 to $10.—the hose $1.50 to $3.50.

and many more fine things . . . so you see how admirably equipped we are to help those harassed hunters of gifts—come in and see if we aren't.
