Farmer Funeral Large—Several hundreds of friends of Lloyd C. Farmer, Salem hardware man who died unexpectedly Monday morning, crowded the Rigdon mortuary chapel yesterday afternoon to pay their last respects to his memory. Many large and beautiful floral offerings were made. Pallbearers were Thomas Wood, John Roberts, Albert Egan, Paul Steadrick, Carl Gabrielson and Edgar Pierce. Rev. F. C. Taylor officiated at the service and interment was made in the Mount Crest Abbey mausoleum.

Busch Radio—The best in radios. Halek Electric Co.

Corey Appointed—H. H. Corey, member of the Oregon public service commission, Tuesday was appointed a member of the legislative committee of the national association of railroads and utilities commissioners. Members of this committee will meet in Washington January 7 in opposition to the so-called Couzens bill providing for federal regulation of all utilities other than railroads. The Couzens bill will be discussed before a senate committee.

Revival Services Attract—A large number of people are being attracted to the revival campaign which Evangelist L. A. Meade and H. C. Meade, musical director, are conducting at the First Evangelical church. The evangelist spoke last night on "Why Does God Not Answer Your Prayers?" setting forth several reasons for unanswered prayers. A large number of persons remained last night for the midnight watch and prayer service. The subject tonight will be "How to Have a Successful and Happy New Year."

A Boy's Job—Some thing stenography is only a girl's job—a mistaken notion. There is nothing better to give a young man a foot-hold in business. The Capital Business College frequently has calls for young men stenographers which it cannot fill—one a few weeks ago. Register now for the beginning class in shorthand next week. Day and night sessions.

Clinics Scheduled—Regular clinics of the county health unit will be in order after today, following the recess due to the vacation period for most schools of the county. A school clinic will be held at Turner Thursday morning and a pre-school clinic thereafter in the afternoon, under direction of Dr. E. L. Russell and Miss Margaret McAlpine. Friday afternoon the regular pre-school clinic will be held at the Salem health center, and also the regular tox-in-antitoxin clinic Saturday morning.

Financial Field of 1929 Marked By Burst of Speculative Bubble

Prices Based on 20 to 200 Times Earnings Prove no Longer Sound; As Prices Come Down, Credit Situation is Not Impaired

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER (Associated Press Financial Writer)
NEW YORK.—(AP)—The year 1929 began with high stock prices, speculative enthusiasm at fever pitch and credit commanding extraordinarily high rates. Before the year closed stocks had lost much of their gains of the past two years.

Speculators throughout the country and from all walks of life were auring burned fingers and credit was once more in abundant supply at reasonable rates.

The story of this complete transformation is a tale of speculative indulgence suddenly giving way to unwarranted pessimism with the rediscovery of the fact that economic progress is not subject to unlimited artificial stimulation.

What had been widely heralded as a "new era" in finance, an era which had, so it was supposed, in many quarters, immunized itself against financial panics by scientific methods of accounting and various stabilizing factors, such as huge investment trusts, came to a violent end in October and early November.

But while the crash of the stock market undoubtedly directly affected vastly more persons than any previous market disturbance, it appears that the indirect influence on the great bulk of the workaday population has been remarkably slight—less, perhaps, than that of any other Wall street disturbance.

This market collapse may, perhaps, be more accurately described than those of the past as the bursting of a bubble.

Since the New York federal reserve bank raised its discount rate successively from 3 1/2 to 5 per cent during the early part of 1928, conservative bankers had viewed with some concern the headlong rush of the public into stock speculation, with the accompanying pouring of funds into brokers' loans.

When the crisis came the banks were prepared. The large Wall street institutions were not caught with frozen loans and were able in the course of a single week to take over about $1,000,000 in stock market loans.

A few minor investment houses failed, but not a single important Wall street institution was carried to the wall.

SHOW STICKERS AUTOISTS TOLD

Secretary of State Issues Warning to Motorists On Oregon Roads

Motor vehicle license stickers covering the first six months of 1930, should be affixed to windshields at once, and not carried about in pockets or billfolds, according to announcement made here Tuesday by Hal E. Hoss, secretary of state.

"Many times traffic officers have halted non-resident cars to inquire about registration in Oregon and have found that the driver had registered but had tucked the sticker away in a pocket of his car coat," said the secretary of state. "The 1930 motorist will be relieved of much embarrassment and will save work for the motor vehicle traffic division if he will place the sticker upon his windshield at once."

"All other stickers should be removed from automobiles before the official one is put in place. Under the statutes now on the books, only the official state stickers are allowable. A despite low dividend yields. The beginnings of the cycle of extraordinary prosperity in industry were conspicuous in the late summer of 1928 and probably reached a climax in the early summer of 1929.

Industry, however, had attained such momentum that record corporate earnings were widely reported through the first three-quarters of 1929, and many leading corporations will report record annual earnings for the year.

suggestion has been made that car owners cover the backs of the stickers with shellac after they are pasted on the glass. This does away with damage from moisture inside the car and should keep the sticker in good condition throughout the half year period.

Hope Springs Up In Demo Breasts As Meet Slated

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 31.—(AP)—The democratic state committee has been called in special session January 8. It was announced here today by J. T. Summerville, secretary of the committee. The meeting will be held at the Multnomah hotel, starting at 1 p. m.

The purpose of issuing the call for the special meeting is to keep over the political situation and see if it is possible to wipe out the factionalism in the party, it was reported here. It was said that some suitable candidate for governor will be discussed.

The meeting promises to be the most important democratic gathering of the year.
