WHERE SCHOOL JOURNEY WILL END

Students of the University of Oregon who go to Hawaii on the summer school cruise will see many varied and interesting sights and enjoy many features of this Paradise of the Pacific. Above, left, an unusual picture of the pit of Pitoumama, Kilauea crater, Mauna Loa volcano. Right—troop of Boy Scouts at Hilo, composed of Japanese, Chinese, Korean, Caucasian and Hawaiian boys. Below, left—a beautiful scene in Kalapana, near famous Black Sand beach. Right—Dr. Thomas A. Jaggar, volcanologist at Kilauea observatory, Hawaii. Dr. Jaggar is regarded as the world's greatest volcanologist, and is expected to give a series of lectures to geology students on the session.

Among several drastic changes in the curriculum of Willamette university under consideration by the faculty is one to make freshman requirements and the high school course fit together more closely than they do at the present time, was the announcement made by Dean Frank M. Erickson yesterday.

The proposed plan will make the requirements of the university elastic enough to enable students coming from high school to continue their studies in a certain line without the repetition of subjects, as is done in some cases now. In illustration, Dean Erickson said that a student who has taken four years of French in high school will not be required to take the two years required for college credit, if he can pass an entrance test satisfactorily.

Another important change under consideration is the requiring of one or two majors along with the student's choice of a major. This will give the student the advantage of having two or three different professors to guide him. Instead of only one major instructor as is the practice now.

The proposals are being discussed by the faculty and adjustments are constantly being made in the suggested changes.

The economics department is undergoing gradual changes and will be expanded some next semester. Professors W. C. Jones and S. B. Laughlin are in charge of the department.

Allen Brothers vs. Albert Olson—Voluntary non-suit has been taken.
