Oh These Women!

By LEOLA ALLARD

The girls are springing new evening shoes, and have you seen them? Sandal effect with a sole and ribbons and gay strips to hold the soles to the feet. The pink toes wiggle under extremely thin silk stockings. They have an old world look that makes you wonder when they will abandon the stockings, I think it won't be long now.

What a poor drag result of an earnest effort Cleopatra was! Aside from the fact that she rode in a barge, draped with silk and strands of flowers, our girls certainly would make her ashamed of herself.

Of course Cleo and her pals did the best they could—with what they had in those days. If there had been any more, those gals would have gotten it.

The next move will be bare feet and painted nails. Then ankle bracelets. After that—who knows?

Speaking of trimmings, I saw a girl last night, whose back looked like an airplane view of Colorado. The entire back of her gown cut away. I counted her

"Contract awarded to the lowest bidder--"

When a corporation wishes to build a factory... when a city constructs a new subway... whenever a large undertaking of that nature is planned, the first step is almost invariably a request for bids on the work. This practice of competitive bidding has saved millions of dollars. It assures the city or corporation of getting the best value for every dollar spent.

The same system can be applied to your own buying. And you can save a proportionate amount of money. How? Simply by consulting the advertising pages of this paper!

When you find yourself in need of a vacuum cleaner, a refrigerator, a pair of shoes, a new suit—anything—don't rush out and buy the first one offered you. Exercise the power of selection that the advertisements give you. Read about each one—what it will do, who makes it, what it costs. Then, when you find the one that best suits your needs and pocketbook, buy it! In this way you'll be spending your money wisely. You'll know what you're getting and how much it costs—before you buy it.

Every advertisement is the bid of some merchant for your trade; consider them carefully before buying
