Announcement is made through the local Southern Pacific offices, of the establishment of another through sleeping car between California, Oregon and Puget Sound.

This new service provides for a through sleeper from San Francisco to Seattle, on train Number

8. The Klamath, which passes through Salem 6:30 p. m., daily. This train also carries through sleeper from the south via Portland to Spokane and by taking advantage of this service passengers for Seattle, Tacoma or Spokane may board the train at Salem and not be required to change cars at Portland, going through to their destinations in the through car. This is in addition to the through sleeper service offered on the Cascade, the Shasta, and the West Coast from Salem daily to Seattle and Tacoma and service to southern Oregon and California is maintained on these trains, operating through on daily
