Further Conflicting Views On, Sugar Rates Are Aired in Court

By D. HAROLD OLIVER Associated Press Staff Writer WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. -(AP)—The sixth day of debate on the sugar tariff brought forth further conflicting views in the senate today and the contesting factions agreed that the vote to be taken not later than noon tomorrow probably would be closed. Democrats advocates of retention of existing rates looked to eastern republicans to decide the issue, while the republican regulars favoring higher protection believed enough democrats and western republicans would go over to their cause to put through
