

TRANS' CORPSE IS BROUGHT UP

Death Wins Desperate Fight On Bottom of Outards River in Canada

while his comrades frantically worked to release him and volunteered, inexperienced at diving though they were, to go down again and again merely to press his hand and give him courage, few details came through to the outside world.

His body was badly bruised and his diving suit was torn, but not badly enough to have let in water to drown him.

Pumping of Oxygen Continued Ceaselessly

And all through the endless wait—as hours dragged grimly into days, and night came and went—his comrades kept pumping oxygen down into his helmet.

There had been little hope that he was alive since yesterday afternoon, when Arvo Silyala, a laborer who without previous diving experience had gone down several times to try to free Trans and to give him courage, reported that he got no response at all when he grasped his hand.

At dusk last night Quosnel Morency and Lewis Begia, who had flown all the way from Quebec in their heavy diving suits with their helmets in their laps, arrived after having been delayed by storm.

Rescuers Go Down Despite Handicaps

It was dark when they went down into the river, and the current was powerful. But they went down, just the same, again and again, and at dawn today they freed Trans.

Hastily they unscrewed his huge helmet and ripped open his suit. A doctor was there, ready to help him. But there was nothing to do. Death that stalks through the ghostly panorama of the river bottoms had freed him first.

Trans was 30 years old. He came from Denmark two years ago. Next spring, he had told his fellow workmen, he was going to send for his wife and his two little sons.

Diver Nearly Killed On Previous Occasion

But the story of what Trans went through may be vividly told in his own words. For once before, in the St. Lawrence river just below Quebec, he had nearly lost his life in a similar experience and it was of this experience as if to justify himself for saying he did not like his job—he told his friends in Montreal before he went to Pointe Aux Outards.

"My life line got caught between two rocks and I was there for hours," he said. "As I realized what had happened, I frantically signed for those above for help."

"But they could do nothing. If they tried to pull me up there was danger of my life line being severed, and then I was doomed to a painful, if quick death."

"No one can imagine my sensations as I stood there hour after hour—knowing my death was almost certain, yet still telling myself there was a small ray of hope left."

Desperate Efforts Made to Escape

"As I writhed back and forth deep down on the bottom, I almost gave up in despair. I kept trying to free myself but my struggles grew weaker as I lost strength."

"I was almost unconscious. I lurched forward in an attempt to stand against the current that was getting stronger all the time, and then all of a sudden—I was free. Weakly I managed to signal to those above, and they pulled me up."

"As I came out of the water I fainted, and they thought I was dead. I came to long enough to satisfy them I wasn't but then I fainted again."

"I hope I never got caught like that again. Trans' friend said he added, 'That's my only dread. It may happen again, though—up there on that new job.'"

CONTRIBUTIONS YET COME IN FOR NEEDY

Donations, both of cash and supplies, continued coming yesterday to the Associated Charities, following the call of the order for assistance in helping the poor. Yesterday three urgent calls for mattresses were received, and inasmuch as Mrs. Mae Young secretary, had no mattresses on hand, she is passing the calls along to the public, in hopes that one three-quarter and two full mattresses can be spared from homes where dire need has not succeeded through the door.

Twenty-five men were fed at the Charities soup kitchen yesterday, and if the group fared better than usual, thanks are due to the Camp Fire Girls of the city who donated a large amount of food left over from the banquet which the organization held the previous night at the Jackson Lee church. The Camp Fire girls groups in the city have ever been ready and willing to help in the Charities work. Mrs. Young said last night in expressing her gratitude to them for their thoughtfulness.

Cash donations received yesterday were from the following: F. T. Reddaway, $2; Theo. Kay Woolen mills, $5; Tallman-Piano store, $2.50; Cobb and Mitchell, $5; Salem Postpaid, $2; George E. Waters, $10; J. C. Francis, $10; George H. Allen, $2.50; M. H. Hartwell, $1; a friend, $5 cents. Several hundred dollars have so far been realized in the campaign for $1350 to keep the work going until June 1.

Above you meet Gordon Nelson who will take an important role in "The Fountain of Youth," which will be presented to Salem theatre goers tonight at the Fox Risinore by the Moroni Olsen players. "This play," Janet Young told me, has, according to her idea, "something in it for every member of the Love Connoisseurs." It was her personal opinion when she was here in "Twelve Thousand" that the play to be given tonight was one of the best that the company had ever done. You will have a chance to see for yourself tonight at 8:15 o'clock. The Lions are sponsoring this play and besides doing yourself a good turn when you attend you will also be doing a worthy cause a good turn—the Boy Scouts are to receive the profits from this play.

You have heard of "three-in-one" and now you are to be introduced to "four-in-one" and this is how. At the Fox Risinore beginning Saturday there are to be four "pictures that you have heard about" to be presented there within the next two weeks.

One of them I have seen and can vouch for from first hand information—that is "The Love Parade" with Maurice Chevalier. It is a musical comedy without rhyme or reason, but it is delightful, and it is certainly amusing. The acting of Chevalier is excellent and his French accent beggars description.

As for the other three there is Bebe Daniels in "Love Comes Along," and who seems a safe bet after "Rio Rita"; there is Ramon Navarro in "Devil May Care"; and then there are the Duncan sisters in "It's a Great Life."

From the sound of things—I ask you—what more could you ask?

Evelyn Brent is at the Grand beginning today in "Darkened Rooms." I enjoyed that show. Evelyn has a splendid voice in its hard, steely way, and she is attractive to watch. The play has some amusing developments in its plot and it also has some excellent photographic effects. If you are looking for a few absorbing minutes this show is a good bet.

"From Headquarters" is the change of show at the Hills, and it is with Monte Blue and Gladys Brockwell and has to do with intrigue, and the United States Marines. There is a love story through it and some mystery that solves itself in an unusual manner.

PANTAGES TO STAY IN JAIL

Release Denied Rich Showman by Judge After Hearing Held

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Alexander Pantages, multimillionaire showman in jail here pending his appeal from conviction of criminally assaulting 17 year old Eunice Pringle, today was refused release on bail.

Superior Judge Fricke ruling that the showing made by Pantages' attorney "is no more sufficient to justify release on bail than the last showing in the latter part of December."

Simultaneously Judge Fricke denounced what he called "adverse efforts of members of the defendant's family to influence this court" to favor the release.

He said Mrs. Lois Pantages had appealed in a three page letter for consideration for her husband, saying he was "a very sick man" what was "needed at home by his sick wife and his children."

Pantages had sought release because of his health, his doctors told the court yesterday that the former theatrical manager was suffering from an acute heart disease which further incarceration might make fatal.

State's physician countered with an assertion that his health was not unusual for a man of his 54 years.

Judge Fricke, ruling on the application for release on bail, cited seeming contradictions in affidavits by Pantages' physicians.

Pantages is under sentence of one to 50 years. Miss Pringle, a few days ago brought suit against him for $1,000,000 damages for the alleged attack upon her last August 9, when as a dancer she went to his offices here seeking a booking on his vaudeville circuit.

Mrs. Pantages recently was granted ten years' probation following conviction of manslaughter for the death of a man in an automobile accident.

COMMITTEE NAMED TO MEASURE SHIPS

Secretary of State Stimson ready to assist them. For the British, first Lord of the Admiralty Alexander and a delegate from the dominions will act with Prime Minister MacDonald.

The first committee meeting will be held at 3 p. m., tomorrow. With the help of Secretary Stimson, Prime Minister MacDonald cautiously and successfully steered today's plenary session through the dangerous whirlpools of European politics.

Italy's decision to withhold discussion of the political issues involved for her enabled the delegates to proceed without delay to consideration of the French compromise plan for fleet measurement. On the American side, Ambassador Gibson furnished a notable contribution to the proceedings by reviewing the history of the conflict between the rival fleets.

Both Premier Tardieu and first Lord of the Admiralty Alexander gave Mr. Gibson high praise for his able analysis and clear statement of the problem over the conference table.

The American diplomat explained that there were, roughly, two schools of thought. That of limitation by categories fixed the tonnage that each country may use for each type of ship, and thereby fixes the total tonnage.

As Mr. Alexander declared later during the session, Great Britain, Japan and America are in complete agreement in favor of limitation by categories. France and Italy are the champions of limitation by global tonnage.

Mickey Mouse NOTES

BY SCRIBES
Mickey Mouse
Zetta Veitchok

Dear Mice:
What a great time we had last Saturday with our mothers and lady friends, and what a fine time they had, too. Gee, they must have got a thrill out of the whole show.

The best of it is they can come every week with us for two bits, and see the whole show, as long as they get in before 3 o'clock.

Great picture this week: Bebe Daniels who was such a surprise in "Rio Rita" will be seen and heard in her newest all talking, singing, picture, "Love Comes Along." They say she is even better in this one than the last one.

The Fanchon and Marco "Hot Domino" idea, the Paramount sound news, and our own Mickey Mouse in "The Barn Dance," chapters four of "Tarzan" titled "The Ivory Tomb." Is the show for Saturday. This Tarzan stuff is certainly exciting, isn't it?

BIDS REQUESTED ON FILTRATION PLANT

remarks as to the delay, the water company official pointed out that the company had spent several thousands of dollars in providing temporary relief.

R. H. Corey, engineer who had a considerable part in planning the system, declared that he had no hesitation in promising that Salem would have the best purification plant in the United States.

Capacity Runs Up To 10,000,000 Gallons
Against a present average consumption of 2,850,000 gallons of water daily, the plant will have a normal capacity of six million gallons and an emergency capacity of nine or ten million. He described the details of the plant, which are in no essential point altered from the plans previously shown to the commission.

Chairman Miller commented that the plans appeared to be carefully prepared and complete, but added that the commission would submit them to its engineers before giving approval or making any recommendations.

Harry N. Crain, who had been called before the commission previously to present complaints in regard to the water company's rates and alleged recent overcharges, was present but did not supply the complaints, and Mr. Miller announced that this matter would be gone into at a later date.
