EYE DEFECTS ARE ANALYZED

Glasses Not Always Needed Says Bulletin by State Board of Health

All eyes that are slightly defective in measurements do not necessarily require corrective glasses, says the weekly bulletin of the state board of health which is directed to eyesight saving.

The systematic examination of public school children has made it possible to detect and classify the different kinds of errors. The greater demands that are being put upon the eyes of the children together with greater use of artificial illumination have resulted in producing symptoms of eyestrain and fatigue.

The general symptoms of eyestrain may be in the form of headaches, dizziness and other conditions not ascribed to the eyes. Headaches are more frequently caused by eyestrain than by any other cause. The headaches that last over night are usually the direct result of eyestrain and are the least frequently recognized as being due to eyestrain.

Continuance of eyestrain not corrected with properly fitting glasses may be associated with symptoms of disturbances of the stomach and intestines. Many nervous disturbances and twitching of muscles may also be due to eyestrain.

Progressive cities have established special classes for those who are handicapped with seriously defective eyesight. These are popularly called, "sight saving classes." The sight saving class helps the child by conserving his eyesight through eliminating all possible eyestrain and teaching habits of eye hygiene.

VARIED SCENERY DELIGHT AS TRAVELER GOES EAST

Lack of Children With Most Families Noted by Former Salem Woman on Her Trip

A daily change of scenery diet is one of the appreciated features of a trip east by way of the Canadian Pacific railroad, finds a former Salem woman who has just completed that experience.

On "The Imperial," C. P. R. Dear Donette: The shades of night are falling on the third day on this train. It has been a restful day, unlike in a outlook, either of the others.

Just after breakfast this morning we drew into the station at Winnipeg. Many of our fellow passengers left us and others came on. The snow was coming down fast in big feathery flakes and all this day it has continued, sometimes almost turning to rain.

I've had trees to look at all day, making up for the lack of yesterday. They were not the great towering firs of the Pacific coast, but smaller evergreens and birches hobnobbing together as I never saw them before.

Underneath this has been the white carpet of snow and here and there where there was a lower spot of land, a lonely lake has nestled.

It was in summer that I saw this before, but I am glad to see the winter landscape now. I have been reading the Montreal "Star." It comes the nearest to satisfying my longing for an Oregonian of any paper yet.

They are calling dinner in the diner and I am truly glad. The meals are just splendid and service fine.

Can't tell you what our porter did last night. I think he feared it might be rather cool as there was quite a sharp wind. He hung a thick wool blanket over the windows in the

NEW REFRIGERATOR CAR IS ON DISPLAY

One of the new Pacific Fruit Express company's new refrigerator cars was on display yesterday and will be on display all day today at the Southern Pacific freight station at Trade and Commerce streets. Four hundred of these cars are being built in Portland for the fresh fruit and poultry shipping business in the Willamette valley, and yesterday a good many of the local carriers and representatives of fruit shippers saw the car and heard A. Johnson, general manager of the express company explain its construction and uses.

These cars are the largest freight refrigerators in the country and were designed especially to take care of the barreled and frozen berry shipments. They measure 37 feet six inches inside, are seven feet high and are eight feet, 11 inches wide. Each car is equipped with collapsible ice bunkers which can be knocked down and the entire space can be utilized for loading when refrigeration is not required.

Special Church Meetings Well Attended Now

Services are being held each evening by Paul De F. Mortimore, evangelist and song leader from Gladstone. Attendance is growing at each service, and an even larger audience is expected tonight to hear the sermon on "Face to Face With God."

The evangelist is a young man but says he believes in the old time religion of power and conviction, and offers it as a remedy for the ills of the time. Special musical features are introduced each evening as well as singing of hymns by the congregation. It has been announced that some very special features in music will be introduced this week.

VOTERS TOTAL FOUND LOWER

Large Number Marked Off Books by Secretary of State, Word

The total registration of voters, as of March 1, for the primary election to be held May 16, was 328,567, as compared with 436,180 prior to the general election held two years ago.

The decrease in the registration is not due to a lesser number of voters, but because of the recent action of the secretary of state in eliminating from his records the names of approximately 50,000 persons who either have died or moved out of the precinct in which they previously lived since the last primary election.

It was said that these names will remain on the poll books of the voting precincts, but will not be recognized by the secretary of state when the election pamphlets are mailed out prior to the primary election.

The records of the state department show that out of the 436,180 voters registered prior to the last general election 328,312 voted, April 15 is the last day for registering for this year's primary election.

The republican registration, which prior to the last general election, was 305,396, has dwindled to 230,852, according to the records of the secretary of state. The democratic registration has decreased from 116,809 two years ago to 87,008.

The progressive registration has decreased from 563 to 419 and the prohibition registration from 1919 to 762. There also was a decrease in the Socialist registration from 1598 to 1194. Miscellaneous registrations have dropped from 10,695 to 8222.

The secretary of state said that while he had no way to determine how many voters would register between now and April 15, the registration on that date might equal or exceed that on the corresponding date two years ago.

COLLIER RETURNS 'EXPENSE' MONEY

A. M. Collier, representative in the legislature from Klamath county, Tuesday returned to the secretary of state $200, which he received under a resolution adopted by the 1929 legislature allowing the legislators $5 per day expense money.

Collier said that he accepted the expense money in good faith but thought it should be returned in view of the supreme court opinion holding the resolution unconstitutional. Collier received $235, but at the time of sending his refund was under the impression that the session lasted only 40 days.

The only other legislator who has returned the expense money is Lloyd Reynolds, representative from Marion county.
