

Agricultural Firm Organizes to Serve Valley Farmers

CORPORATION'S ARTICLES FILED

Charles Archerd of Salem To Be Executive Head of Company

Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday for the Allied Agricultural Industries, designed as a holding company for the Charles E. Archerd Implement company of Salem and the Archerd-Brewer Gordon company of Portland. Another subsidiary grain corporation will be formed to handle the grain end of the business which is designed as an all-valley integrated organization for selling implements and farm supplies to farmers and purchasing from them their staple commodities. Charles E. Archerd will be the executive head of the new concern and Salem will be the headquarters. A new mill for manufacturing feed will be built in Salem and a grain warehouse will be established here. The expansion plans contemplate securing stores in important cities of the valley during the next few years.

R. O. Snelling, with offices in the United States National Bank building, will act as financial agent for the holding company. Its capitalization is 10,000 shares of preferred stock at a par value of $25.00, and 15,000 shares of common stock, with a nominal value of $1.00 per share. The preferred stock is 6 per cent cumulative stock, participating up to 10 per cent in the profits of the company. General distribution of the shares will be obtained through Mr. Snelling, the buyer of preferred stock being permitted to buy one share of common stock with each share of preferred.

Mr. Archerd was formerly Oregon manager for the John Deere plow company. He has been in the implement business in Salem for the past 18 years. About five years ago a Portland store known as the Archerd-Brewer-Gordon company was organized. The stores handle farm implements and dairy supplies and buy clover seed, grain and other products of the farm.

The Allied Agricultural association through its subsidiaries, will manufacture mill feeds, with retail to the farmer. Implements and supplies, and will in turn purchase or act as buying agents for the farmers' produce: grain, hay, seed, cream, poultry and similar commodities, except hops and perishable crops. The concern may engage in farming or in financing farmers. Stock will be offered to farmers in the effort to tie up the farmers with the enterprise, offering them a share in its earnings. The grain corporation will be in charge of an experienced grain buyer and will buy for the milling and export trades. The implement corporation will be in charge of the present Archerd store on Court and Commercial by erecting a feed mill plant there 25x125. More floor space will be provided for the business. A grain warehouse will be built here with railroad spur track facilities.

Dog Tags Found More Numerous Than Heretofore

In spite of the higher rate of tax for dogs within Marion county this year, there have been more tags issued thus far in 1930 than there were at the same time in 1929. Figures compiled by County Clerk Beyer show that 3200 tags have been sold during the present year while 3051 were sold during an equal length of time last year.

Bligh's Capitol is making an interesting innovation new to Salem although it is being done in many of the theatres in other cities. From now on each evening there will be a radio program which will let the audience get the favorites, "Amos and Andy" and still let them hear and see the early show. This is service with a smile—at least when you hear "Amos and Andy."

There is entertainment to suit four decided tastes at the Grand theatre tonight. There is one of the best golf pictures it has been my pleasure to see—with plenty of comedy and good shots. There is mystery in the psychic work of Madame Holt and the tiny four year old Princess Pat both of whom answer questions from the audience by gazing into a crystal; and there is Billie Dove in "Her Private Affair" with plenty of excellent horses and riding to bounds, love, intrigue and a dirty crack at the Americans in England. The Grand has an excellent bill.

AMERICAN DRY LAW IS LAUDED

Leaders Rally to Defense of Eighteenth Amendment at Senate Quiz

prohibition would eliminate future economic crises. He insisted, however, that any future depression would, in all likelihood, be less serious than in the past. The writer specified he was not discussing prohibition from a moral standpoint but merely was presenting his observations.

Keating followed Crowther and testified the brewer, the distiller and the dive keeper were responsible for prohibition because they had refused to comply with regulation of the liquor traffic. Now after a decade, he said, the liquor men were "back here boasting of their contempt for law and trying to bluff the American people with threats of civil war if the law is not permitted to have their way."

The former representative said the anti-prohibitionists could not muster 100 votes in the house for repeal of the 18th amendment and challenged the wets to place a candidate on the ticket in every congressional district next November to determine whether the country wanted prohibition.

Presenting the results of a telegraphic poll he had just conducted on prohibition questions among presidents of leading colleges and Christian Endeavor unions in 40 states, Dr. Foling said he had reached the conclusion that there was "decidedly less drinking now among college and high school students and among youth generally than before prohibition. He maintained that in every economic level the youth of the country was better off now than under pre-prohibition status. He stressed particularly an improvement which he said had been observed during the last two years.

He declared it was time to stop "slandering our own sons and daughters for after all full account has been taken of all the moral delinquents. America's youth are intrinsically sound and generally worthy as youth ever has been."

High School Girl Has Severe Shock

Ruth Clark, junior at the high school, suffered a nervous shock yesterday afternoon as the result of an accident at the school gymnasium. She was running in the gymnasium, and fell, rolling over and striking her head against the bleachers. She was knocked out and fainted several times after the accident, but examination by Dr. Vernon A. Douglas, county health officer, failed to show the slightest cut or mark on her head. Douglas said he believed she would be entirely recovered in a day or two.

"I believe we are over-doing our efforts to remove emotion from religion," King stated.

"Show me a negro who has no fervency and noise in his religion and I will show you one without religion. I cannot see why we must reserve to the sports, to the field of stock market speculation to the field of politics, all our emotions. Demonstration is natural in religion."

Organization to Be Formed in Salem to Back Portland Candidate

not carry the load of being governor and commute back and forth between here and Portland. I should expect to be right on the job as governor and would want my family here and would make my home here. I am not going to do what one ambitious candidate promised at one time, to come to Salem and build a great mansion; but a work as heavy as the governorship would require a person to live right here."

Mr. Corbett also explained his recent appearance before a group of contractors in Portland, where he quoted remarks indicated that he was still opposed to the building of the state office building, which had drawn criticism here in Salem. He said he had been called before the contractors to relate something of the reason back of the appointment of the interim committee for the study of the industrial compensation act. In the course of his impromptu remarks he related the history of compensation legislation and that he opposed in the legislature the financing of the state building out of the segregated accident fund for fear that some future legislature might refuse to provide funds for the rentals which are due the accident fund on the ground that the state had originally put in a half million dollars into the accident funds. But he told the contractors that his objection was satisfied when the legislature passed a resolution waiving any claim on behalf of the state to this half million dollar appropriation. This he said, satisfied him, and satisfied the lumbermen who had brought the suit against the law.

Payne stated following the meeting that his family would remain in Salem until the close of school, and that he himself will probably go into evangelistic work in the south. He says he has received, since his first resignation submitted several weeks ago and at that time voted down, a number of calls from other states for his services as an evangelist.
