Few Flurries Seen In Gubernatorial Contest During Past Seven Days

No Candidate Yet Has Inside Track in Dash for Governor's Position

The seventh week before the primaries May 16 came to a close Saturday without one event of state-wide significance to depict a trend in gubernatorial politics or to make or mar the fortunes of a single candidate.

True, it brought sectional and temporary flurries but in the main the week was a quiet one with every candidate putting in a fullseven-day shift in building a fence supposedly high enough to assure nomination and election.

From Jacob E. Bennett who slipped into town here Tuesday to make a three-minute talk before the Kiwanis club to Governor Al Norblad who was back Tuesday from a two-day get-acquainted tour in Klamath Falls, every candidate is assured of victory - to quote the candidate himself. Bennett points with pride to the Multnomah quota of voters who have followed him in years past; the incumbent thinks he starts with a 20,000 advantage due to his occupancy of the chief post and thus predicts victory in all but two counties in Oregon. Race Still Belongs

To Almost Anybody The keen political observer, if he be fair and impartial, may detect a leaning or an advantage for one candidate or another, but if he confesses the truth, no single candidate may as yet by any means be conceded a victory. It large depends on the place one garners his political talk to ascertain for sure if anyone is to be

As the time drew near for seting upon the mayor's veto or erdinances proposing to accord the people this right, champions of the municipal ownership cause within the council were more confident than they had been previously that the measures wend be passed. Ten .Votes Needed

To Override Veto Ten votes are necessary, the exact number cast in favor of the ordinances providing a special election May 16 on the proposed $7000 bond issue for an appraisal of the water system, when they came up for disposition two weeks ago. If the aldermen voting favorably at that time all attend Monday night and none has changed his mind in the matter, the measure will go on the ballet.

However, there has been much talk in the last few days since the pressure being brought to bear on certain aldermen either to change their votes or to defeat the issue by failing to attend the meeting.
