SALEM TO UNDERGO PORTLAND INVASION

Flying Squadron of Portland Gas Company Due This Week; Vaudeville

The entire field sales division of the Portland Gas & Coke company will invade Salem all this week.

The caravan will leave Portland early Monday morning, arriving at Salem about 9 a.m. and will reach the office and salesroom of the company after having traversed Salem's principal business streets. The caravan will be met at the outskirts of our city by Lief Bergsvik and Lewis Calhoun of the local staff as guides. All in all, 25 autos will be in line.

These hand-picked, experienced salesmen of the Portland Gas & Coke company will neglect Portland for the entire week in order to make a clean sweep of visiting Salem people to "preach the gospel" of gas "the modern fuel and the greatest servant of all."

Education, Not Sales. After the campaign of education is finished, the merchants selling gas appliances and the company's own store expect to do considerable business in selling gas appliances, but the campaign itself next week is not for the sake of selling, but to get in touch with the people, to present the facts about gas as a fuel used in cooking, waterheating, house heating and refrigeration.

The group will meet early every morning for breakfast and inspirational kickoff and will gather around the supper table every evening to report what has been done during the day.

Mr. Calhoun, who is in charge of the details of the Convaas, has 2100 addresses in the city which during by 5 1/2 days available divided by the number of representatives on hand, will necessitate each man to finish and report on 20 calls a day.

"Our new business department," said John Hartog, manager of the company's electrical department, "will be greatly handicapped in Portland by giving up its entire field sales division, but considers it well worth while to get in closer touch with the Salem people, whom I have found very agreeable to substituting gas for their present methods of heating food."

Free Theatrical Show. "To celebrate the event," he continued, "we have rented the Grant Theatre for Monday evening and will furnish those who can give in with the worth-while vaudeville and musical entertainment, entirely free of charge. There will be no admission charge, nor collection of any kind, nor any effort to sell anybody anything and the merchant is invited to sell his wares in the boxes reserved for them. Children must come with their parents."

The show starts at 8 p.m. and will bring 15 people to Salem to entertain the audience."

Eyes, and Their Effects

No face can be really pleasing with weak, tired or inflamed eyes. They are not only unlovely, but they make the owner utterly miserable. There is something pathetic about eyes that are weak and strained.

Your spirits are reflected in your eyes and the admiration of your spirit by your associates is one of the great sources of happiness and satisfaction.

We usually interpret "A good business eye" as clear, keen and bright. Successful people in the business world acknowledge normal vision an imperative necessity to present day progress.

Figures compiled from a Federal survey disclose the fact that there are actually millions of people who are handicapped because of defective eyes. Thousands being forced to discontinue their present endeavors and find employment in other walks of life. This continual readjustment has shown a gradual increase in the past ten years.

Sight observation and a keener appreciation of the value of sight is given as the only solution in reducing these figures of this great host of Americans who are forced to change their work on account of defective sight.

Only competent optometrists who have made a scientific study of eyes and their effects through a period of years and have modern equipment to examine the functions of this delicate organ, can instantly recognize, prescribe and make a pair of lenses that will give you normal vision.

If you are conscious that your vision is not what it should be, do not procrastinate a day longer. Protect yourself by protecting your eyes. A thorough examination and correct, scientifically ground lenses will normalize your eyes and bring about the effect of natural vision.
