Music Week Plans Take On Added Color

"Music Week" will be something to be remembered with a smile of satisfaction if the plans which are under way at the present time are carried through with the enthusiasm with which they are being arranged. The churches will offer special services to the day beginning with May 4 which is the opening day of music week.

Following that Monday music day plans are the most interesting of all in that the plans is new to Salem and that there are being planned so many excellent programs for the occasion. It is under the direction of Mrs. Stephen Stone and is being called "at home night." At this time many homes are being opened to as many folks as each can accommodate for special musical programs. Some will be piano programs, some community singing, some vocal programs and some radio music. The interest is very keen in this "at home" night.

From Silverton comes the following plan for music week in that city.

The local music week committee met at the home of Mrs. Gertrude L. Cameron, Friday evening to make tentative plans for Silverton's observance of National Music week.

The plans discussed show an outline for an unusually fine manner of observance. The committee will ask the various churches to observe the opening of music week, May 4. Pastors will very likely bring music into their sermons and special musical numbers will likely be offered. Some of the churches have already signified their intention of giving special programs during the afternoon or evening.

One evening of the week will be known as Circuit night at which time committees of musicians will call at the homes where there are shut-ins and give a half hour of music. Local hospital authorities will also be consulted and if there is no one ill that it would be injurious a short program will be given there some time during the week.

One evening of the week will be known as "people's night," and at this time a concert called "Ye Olde Tyme Concert" will be given. A number of Silverton's local soloists are being asked to appear in costume. Mrs. Ernest Palmer and Miss Lillie Madsen complete the committee from the Woman's club. Mrs. G. B. Benton, chairman of the Woman's club regular program committee, has also been asked to assist in Music week arrangements here.

What Easter Bunny would not be more than glad to call on any one of these young folk and then be willing to stay if he could only manage to interest them in himself? From the appearance the matter of interest would not be hard to manage for they seem to be interested in everything and everybody.

Four of these personages are within ten days of being the same age—Harvey Augustine Hixson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Hixson, and seated in the upper center is seven months old; Joseph Irwin Eoff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Asel Eoff is seven months old today and will be baptised at the First Presbyterian church in celebration of the fact; he is in the upper right hand corner pretending to be asleep but look at the twinkle in his eyes. Jane Carson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Carson sits in the center keeping peace between Patricia and Lewis Franklin.

What Paris is Wearing

By E. DORSEY

PARIS—All that glitters, whether it be gold or not, is of fashion importance nowadays, according to Paris designers of style. Brilliance is one of the most interesting virtues of smart clothes, say the designers—and they put shining jewels on every hook in the list of smart clothes.

Hard gem conditions have brought out this winter, more sparkling gems than in many seasons past, fashion authorities say. Whole diamonds, and the richest diamonds, are made of soft and shiny, and are accompanied by necklaces and bracelets that complete a glittering outfit.

Current evening gowns are of one or two types—either the gown themselves are made of shimmering with stream and beads, or fashioned of some shining stuff that catches the light, or the frocks are of some dull light-absorbing fabric that forms a background for plenty of blazing jewels.

A well-known dressmaker and a world-famous jewelry designer in line do in Paris both contribute to this phase of fashion in collaboration to design this sparkling necklace and earring. The ball-shaped beads are of immense size, covered with diamonds in diamond setting, and each bead set with a large garnet. The ensemble is worn with a garnet satin evening gown, with square décolletage.
