J. Lyman Steed Is Exonerated by State Board of Control

Recent Charges Not Believed By Officials, Decision Here Indicates

J. Lyman Steed, superintendent of the Oregon state school for the deaf, against whom charges were preferred by members of the state association for the deaf, and numerous individuals, is to be retained in his position, according to announcement made by the state board of control here Thursday.

Two hearings were held here recently at which both the opponents and proponents of Mr. Steed gave their testimony. It was alleged by opponents of Steed that he was cold-blooded in his attitude toward the pupils in the school, that he discriminated against certain teachers, and had eliminated many social functions in the institutions. The charge also was made that he preferred oral to manual instruction. The board of control, in its decision, gives Mr. Steed authority to use whatever methods he may deem most advisable in restoring viscipline that has been shattered by dissention in the teaching

"It is the sense of the Oregon state board of control," read the decision, "that we indorse and approve the work of Superintendent Steed. We uphold and sustain his program for the education of the students under his charge, and unqualifiedly recomment that he adopt such disciplinary measures as shall in his judgment remove the cause of the dissention and strife evident in his teaching staff.

"We deplore the continued agitation against the institution by the adult deaf, and ask their cooperation to the end that the state administration, the school and the public may work in harmony for that great desideratum, the removal of the handicap, as far as humanly possible, for our non-hearing youth." Testimony offered at the recent hearing indicated that the complaints against Steed were inspired by outside influences, and at least one disloyal instructor in
