

UNITED PRESS OPENS BUREAU

Earl H. Leif to Take Charge With James Rowe as Assistant

Monday morning the United Press added two men to its staff at Salem and inaugurated a new bureau here similar to that conducted at Olympia, Wash., and at Sacramento, Calif.

Earl H. Leif, formerly bureau manager in the Washington capitol, comes to Salem to take charge of the bureau here while James Rowe, one of the staff at Sacramento, comes to Salem to be Mr. Leif's assistant. Al Lindbeck, who has represented the United Press and the Oregon Journal in Salem for years, will continue in his present capacity.

Far more extensive statewide release of statehouse news is contemplated by the United Press which will greatly augment each daily wire release now being sent out. In addition a daily letter will be sent out by mail and the weekly news letter now being sent by Lindbeck to a number of Oregon weeklies will be enlarged and the service extended to more papers.

Interpretative articles from the state house are planned, Leif said this week, in discussing his plans. He is of the opinion that the coverage of the capitol news can be greatly extended.

Sending of news will be from the United Press rooms in the Brown building over the offices of the Capital Journal. New telegraph machines recently installed, permit sending of news from a keyboard here as well as the automatic receiving of the news.

GENERAL MOURNS CHAPLAIN'S DEATH

Deep sorrow at the death of Chaplain W. S. Gilbert, colonel in the Oregon national guard with which he served for more than 30 years, was expressed last night by Major General George A. White upon return from five days' spent at Camp Clatsop. General White said:

Chaplain Gilbert's death brings a pall of sorrow to thousands of men and women in Oregon. No man was ever richer in friends, in the rewards of long and faithful service in the interests of others. Added to a long life as a Presbyterian pastor was his vital work as chaplain to Oregon's citizen soldiery. For more than 30 years he served with the Oregon National Guard, going with the men to camps, and to wars. He served under fire with the Oregon regiment in the Philippines, again in the Mexican border trouble and went to France with the men in 1917. His courage and devotion brought him the cross de guerre, one of few chaplains to be so decorated.

To thousands of young soldiers on foreign soil Chaplain Gilbert was a father. He looked after their physical as well as their spiritual welfare, saw to it that they got enough to eat, visited them when they were sick, counseled with them over their problems. At the graves of hundreds of Oregon men, at home and on foreign soil, Chaplain Gilbert said the last prayer.

"No man ever had a richer and finer sympathy for others, or a greater spirit of service. No man was ever more firmly enshrined in the hearts of those with whom he served. If there is a comfort in his loss his countless friends will find it in the fact that death came softly and at home."
