After possession is secured the plant shall be operated by a water commission consisting of five men serving without pay. First apregular city election would select

The vote to purchase the water plant comes as the culmination of a long beries of circumstances. Several times in the past the city was on the point of purchasing the plant when deals were blocked. Once the veto of a mayor defeated purchase. Three years age the city was negetiating with the former owners but the negotiations were suspended when the newly formed Oregon-Washington Water Service company which was picking up water properties in the northwest, stepped in and pur-chased the plant. The company was new and its operating managers were new.

The real difficulties began in the fall of 1928 when Salem water auddenly "went bad." Presence of aleae in the water made it herrid to taste or smell. The company seemed helpless to remedy the situation for a long time, attributing the trouble to low water in the river. Investigations were begun and temporary filter beds on the island put in and this summer the company is putting in the filter plant which is hoped witt give a superior quality of water for domestic use. Last winter following changes in office personnel and installation of a new bookkeeping system charges were made that the company was overcharging its pa-trons. These complaints were investigated by the public service commission and found to be groundless save for apparent errors in a few cases. Nevertheless the agitation created ill feeling against the water company. The manager, J. T. Delaney, who had come to Salem after the difficulties over the water quality began, endeavored to allay public feeling but the situation had gone too far and the people turned to public ownership, hoping to settle the question finally by acquiring the plant. The revolt of the public was not due to any mismanage-ment of Delaney's but the dissat-isfaction of the public in dealing with a private concern over its water supply whose control rest-ed in San Francisco or New York. The Oregon Stages bus fran-chise was approved by the people by a vote of $214 to 2527. This grants a five-year exclusive transhise to operate bases in Salom,

Headache May Be Caused By Eye-Strain

An Optometrist can determine what treatment is necessary to stop your headaches after a thorough routine optometric eye examination.

Every headache exacts its toll of energy, slowly undermines your health and cuts down your efficiency.

Headaches are nature's danger signals to warn you that there is something wrong. Most persons are handicapped by them in various degrees of intensity and frequency. For they are a common complaint from childhood to old age. But few persons realize that many headaches are the direct result of defective eyesight.

Headaches are divided generally into four classes: dull constrictive, pressing, and pulsating headaches. The first three are the ones most likely to be caused by an eye defect.

Six of the twelve pairs of nerves in the head have some connection with the eyes. An eyestrain, brought about by the unnatural demands of modern life, quickly causes irritation of these nerves and a headache soon follows.

In some cases glasses may be required to relieve the strain that is causing the headaches. while for others, corrective eye exercises may remedy the defect.

You cannot afford to be handicapped by headaches.

Not all headaches are caused by eyestrain—but the great majority of headaches are, so start, your investigation by calling on an optometrist for an eye examination.
