SCHOOL BUS IS PRAISED Beauty of Service Is Seen in Orange Vans CHILDREN GRATEFUL

By LILLIE M. MAGEE

RICKEY, June 4—If any one had said a year ago that the old yellow Highland bus was beautiful or even pretty they would have been laughed at but to the parents of the high school children the big sisters of the Highland bus are one of the most satisfactory sights that decorate the highways for they stand for comfort, safety and proper supervision of the children from the time they leave home until they are back again. Not only that but many a boy and girl who otherwise could not go to high school now has an equal chance with his neighbors.

Even the much ridiculed color is an asset for the children as it stands for safety. While the gray buses are much more beautiful to look at they are not easily seen any distance on a cloudy or foggy winter day while if any thing can be seen it's the bright orange colored school buses and this perhaps may prevent many an accident.

Rickey was one of the foremost districts in the county to work for the school-buses and it was not only the people who had children that worked but some of the first to sign the petitions were persons who had no children in school, but are deeply interested in the welfare of all the children. When the Salem school board did not think it possible to have the children transported for $40 per year the Rickey representative was among those who helped find a man who would take the contract and the community have anxiously watched to see whether the venture would be a success or a failure.

While a few unpleasant incidents have occurred which have been properly dealt with and there have been a few slight unavoidable accidents the people in this vicinity feel that transportation has been a success. They also feel that when the children enter bus No. 11 of which E. C. Kruger has charge that their children are not only in the care of a careful driver and a good disciplinarian but also a friend.

There was some objections to the school buses on the ground that the grade pupils were obliged to walk but some of the high school pupils have to walk a mile and more as far as the average grade pupils walk to school to meet the bus, and provision has been made that for a very small amount, when the bus is not crowded, that grade pupils may ride and on stormy days many a child is picked up tree of charge.

While the county is out for transportation it would require between 20 and 25 cents to take care of the pupils from bus No. 11 and when we consider the number of bus lines, this would increase the cost of road upkeep besides increasing the traffic the time of day when it is the most congested.

Altogether this community is pleased with the result of the first year of transportation and appreciate the cooperation of the county officers, the Salem school board, the principals and teachers of the Salem high and junior high schools the bus owner and drivers with the parents in making this venture a success.

Judicial Body Is Favored by Presbyterians

CINCINNATI, June 4.—(AP)—The 142nd Presbyterian General assembly of the United States today approved an overture establishing a permanent judicial commission as the supreme court of the church but modified it to retain concurrence of the assembly in the final action on all judicial cases.

The plan as submitted would have given the permanent judicial commission the power of taking final action on questions of doctrine and on cases involving ministers and presbyteries, but this was found illegal according to the constitution of the church. The modification was that voting ministers and elders shall retain the privileges of determining matters of doctrine and deciding judicial cases against church members.
