EFFECTENCY OF SESSION STUDY

Interim Committee to Meet Here Today; Will View Legislative Halls

The interim committee appointed at the 1929 legislative session to recommend some system whereby the legislative activities may be carried on without the confusion attending previous sessions, will meet in Salem today.

The committee will inspect the house of representatives, senate chamber and all committee rooms utilized by the legislature. Although no definite plan has been considered by the committee up to this time, it was reported Thursday that an effort probably will be made to limit the floor privileges to members of the two houses of the legislature, the desk clerks, legislative officers and the press. Stenographers probably will not be allowed to occupy chairs on the floor as during previous sessions.

Washington Plan May Be Adopted

There also is a possibility that the committee will adopt the Washington system in connection with the employment of clerks and stenographers. Records show that the cost of conducting the Washington legislature is far less than in Oregon, regardless of the fact that the Washington legislature meets 60 days and has a larger membership than in Oregon.

Any material changes in the physical plant of the Oregon legislature probably will have to be deferred until next year for the reason that the secretary of state has no funds available to defray unusual obligations.

Hal Hoss, secretary of state, and T. B. Kay, state treasurer, probably will confer with the interim committee and offer suggestions as to how the proposed improvements may be brought about.

POLICE CLAIM MURDER CLUE

Man Recently Released at King's Park Believed Latest Slayer

NEW YORK, June 19. (AP)—A man said to answer the description of the Queens slayer to night shot and critically wounded Morris Horwitz, 50 year old insurance broker, near his home in Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, June 19. (AP)—Hoping to solve soon the manly killing of two men in Queens within a week, law forces of New York tonight were organized in a hunt for an insane man who escaped a month ago from the Kings Park asylum, at East Islip, Long Island. He is Joseph Estica, slayer of William Gilbridge, Brooklyn contractor, in Freeport, L. I., in 1928.

Hope of an early capture of the insane slayer was raised today by the story of Edward Miller, 15-year-old boy, that he probably had seen the slayer after the murder of Noel Sowley, whose body was found in his auto in a lonely road near Creedmore Monday night.

The body told police a man came out of the bushes as he rode his bicycle close by the scene of the murder, and told him if he looked sharp as he went along he would see an automobile parked on the side of the road.

Hallucinations Are Harbored
This man, who was mentioned first as only a casual picker of dandelions, may be the killer, police believe. Police search for Miller as soon as it was discovered that Estica was at large.

The same man who slew Sowley is also believed responsible for the killing of Joseph Mozyński, College Point, Queens, a week ago yesterday.

Estica suffered delusions that his mission was to recover certain mysterious documents and to protect women. Letters to newspapers purporting to come from the slayer of Sowley and Mozyński have referred vaguely to missing papers of great value, and after each murder the killer escorted to the nearest transportation line the young woman found in the parked car with his victim along in an isolated lane in a thinly settled section of Queens.

Police today scoured by-paths along the Boston road in the Bronx after a letter to a newspaper had said the body of a third victim would be found there. Search failed to reveal any trace of a body.

Freeman Mickenham, the old man's son, took charge of the car Thursday, and promised to get rid of it for his father. It was upon Freeman's advice that Mickenham changed his plea from not guilty to guilty, the recorder said.

Hewitt was still holding his own at the hospital late Thursday night, attendants said, but his condition is still critical on account of his advanced age.

Overhead Road Crossing Held Not Needed Now
The state highway department Thursday petitioned the public service commission to vacate an order issued May 1, 1929, authorizing the construction of an overhead crossing over the tracks of the Southern Pacific company near Juno, Tillamook county, in connection with the improvement of the Roosevelt coast highway.

It was pointed out to the public service commission that the overhead crossing was not constructed, and that relocation of the highway has made the improvement unnecessary. A grade crossing probably will be ordered in lieu of the overhead crossing.

Mickenham Offers Car At Bargain

Ferdinand Mickenham has an Essex coupe to sell.

At least that's what he told Recorder Poulsen Thursday after he pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving and paid a fine of $50. In addition the recorder suspended his driver's license for an indefinite period.

It all grew out of an accident Wednesday in which Mickenham ran down Isaiah Hewitt, 75, and inflicted serious injuries as a result of which the aged man lies between life and death at the Deaconess hospital. Mickenham himself a man of 83 years, is held incapable of handling an automobile, and has been in trouble before on account of his driving.

Freeman Mickenham, the old man's son, took charge of the car Thursday, and promised to get rid of it for his father. It was upon Freeman's advice that Mickenham changed his plea from not guilty to guilty, the recorder said.
