STORES OFFER 13TH ANNUAL BARGAIN DAY

Salem Merchants Unite in Slashing Prices For Valley Shoppers

Friday, June 27, Selected As Date For Yearly Specialty

Friday, June 27, has been set as the day for the 13th Annual Bargain Day of the Salem stores under the sponsorship of the Capital Journal and The Oregon Statesman.

For years Salem merchants have cooperated in making this a feature event of the early summer with special presentations of merchandise of merit.

It was a dozen years ago that Salem's Bargain Day was started under the sponsorship of the two Salem daily papers.

Prices Will Be Greatly Reduced

This year the day promises to have special attraction to buyers. Low price levels will be held still lower on many articles in seasonal demand.

Hundreds of people residing in Polk and Marion counties and neighboring portions of Yamhill, Linn and Clackamas counties can make Salem their regular trading point where now they do their marketing elsewhere.

Just what special feature will be offered by the stores cooperating will be announced in their advertisements to appear later in the week.

Irwin said he drove Gibbons to the coast, thence to southern Oregon and became ill at Phoenix, Ore., where he was arrested. Gibbons, Irwin said, left Phoenix for Portland and Seattle. Irwin was visiting a sister at Phoenix when arrested.

CHANGES IN METHODIST PULPITS HERE UNLIKELY Portland planned by the Astoria chamber of commerce. So far as it is evident now, there is possibility of but one change here, with fairly persistent rumor that Rev. Harry E. Gardner of Jason-Lee will be assigned elsewhere. Rev. Gardner has just closed two very successful years' work here and it is the report that his appointment elsewhere or reappointment here will meet with mutual approval of his congregation and the pastor himself. Rev. Selbert will preach his farewell sermon here this morning. The Center street church, of which he has been pastor for two or three years, last week voted to discontinue the church property has been turned over to the conference trustees for disposition. Rev. Selbert will be assigned elsewhere. (Turn to page 2, col. 6.)

PRINTED SLANDER CASE CALLED TO POLICE ATTENTION Slander cards, said to have been printed in a local job shop, circulated to the homes of neighbors of the persons involved, were responsible for police investigation of the matter yesterday. Signed by "One of the Neighbors," the cards said: "Neighbors—Do you think that this neighborhood scandal involving Mrs. _____, a man with a wife and two children, should be brought to the attention of the authorities? Mrs. _____ has a young daughter, and it is for her protection that a police investigation should be made." It is thought the husband of the woman in the case circulated the circulars. The husband and wife are not living together. The woman, who says she found the card one evening just as she saw her husband leave her front door, says she has kept company with the man mentioned on the placard.

Old John Barleycorn stuck his face in the door but got a swat on his red nose and had to beat a retreat. Billy Delzell assured the party members that it looked like a democratic year, and John S. Marshall, the new county chairman opined there was a rift in the clouds which might let the democratic candidate for governor slip through.

LINGLE SLAYER ARREST LIKELY IN FEW HOURS

"Red" Forsythe, Held One Of Toughest Gunmen, Said Recognized

Was Former Associate of Frank Foster, Owner of Death Pistol

CHICAGO, June 22—(Sunday)—(AP)—The Herald and Examiner today says the authorities expect hourly to arrest James B. ("Red") Forsythe, described as one of the city's toughest hoodlums, as the slayer of Alfred (Jake) Lingle, Tribune reporter.

Forsythe, the paper says, has been identified as the blonde youth who shot and killed Lingle from behind in a pedestrian tunnel at the foot of Randolph street June 9.

Forsythe, 24, is an associate of killers and racketeers and former member of the Capone gang, under Danny Stanton, Capone's southside lieutenant. He also is known as Fawcett.

WAS INTIMATE OF FRANK FOSTER Forsythe also was known to police as an intimate of the dapper Frank Foster, to whose hands the gun used to kill Lingle has been traced. Foster was once a member of the north side Aiello-Moran outfit.

In recent months, however, both men had changed their allegiance. Forsythe going over to the Aiello-Moran gang and Foster going south to Capone.

Police have held since within a few hours of the murder of Lingle it had been done by Aiello-Moran killers and they believe Foster's gun was dropped near the body to lead him in revenge for his shift in allegiance.

Record Missing At Police Bureau Forsythe, police said, was convicted a year ago of carrying a pistol and was sentenced to serve a year in the house of correction to pay a fine of $200.

His picture and Bertillon description, with finger prints, should therefore have been in the bureau of identification. They are not there, the Herald Examiner said.

Neither is there any record of Forsythe's having served the jail term. Both these angles are being investigated now and every policeman who ever crossed "Red" Forsythe's trail has been put on the special detail which is hunting him throughout Illinois.

Dry Laws Didn't Fill Oregon Prison; Out of 901 Convicts Only 47 Prohibition Violators

NEARLY TWICE AS MANY IN FOR MURDER, RECORDS REVEAL; LARCENY COMES FIRST WITH 165, BURGLARY RANKING CLOSE SECOND

Prohibition and its enforcement are responsible in only an extremely minor degree for the congested condition of the Oregon state penitentiary, contrary to reports which have been circulated throughout the state. This state of affairs was disclosed Saturday when Henry W. Meyers, superintendent of the prison, made public a report showing that only 47 of the 901 prisoners now in the institution are serving terms for infractions of the prohibition statutes.

The report shows that the largest number of prisoners in the penitentiary are serving terms for larceny, with burglary a close second. There are a total of 165 men and women incarcerated for larceny, while 108 prisoners are serving terms for burglary. In 85 cases commitments were received for assault and robbery, while 78 men are serving terms for infractions of the prohibition statutes.

HINDU MOB ATTACK INJURES HUNDREDS

BOMBAY, June 21.—(AP)—Demonstrations here today by the national followers of Mahatma Gandhi resulted in more than 600 injuries, the great number in Bombay since the civil disobedience campaign opened March 12.

There are indications of other tumultuous scenes tomorrow, with police preparing to break up a demonstration of sympathy for 17 members of the eighteenth Garhwal rifles who were imprisoned for disobeying orders in a riot at Peshawar.

The commissioner of police notified the new president of the Bombay congress committee, Mrs. Perin Captain, granddaughter of the late Dadabhai Naoroji, that all such manifestations will be prohibited, but the police are making plans on the basis that congress will ignore the order.

Today's trouble occurred principally on the Maiden Esplanade, a large meeting ground forbidden to nationalists by official order yesterday because of native troops quartered at one end.

2 Bandits Rob Till At Store

Nervous Youths Get Small Sum, Pass Up $6 More

Confectionery Man on N. Capitol Held Up With Gun

"Sit still." And that's what E. E. Rothacher did as he looked into the barrel of a gun held by a youthful "stickup man" who entered his confectionery store at 697 North Capitol street about 9:45 Saturday night.

Meanwhile another youth rifled the till and took $15.10 from it.

Rothacher said last night he felt certain that he had seen the youth before and thought the stickup was a joke when they first entered the store. He was reading a paper in the back of the shop and was alone when the holdup occurred.

Both of the young men are thought to have been familiar with the store and with the vicinity because when they left they went west on Union street and disappeared in the darkness. Police who were notified had found no trace of them last Saturday night.

Nervousness Shown By Both Bandits The men were evidently "amateurs," said Rothacher, for they were nervous when they approached him. He believes they were about 20 years old, and was certain that the youth with the gun had been in the store before. They were decently dressed, he said.

He obtained a good description of the one who held him up, but could not see the one who rifled the till in the front of the store. They were not cautious in their leave-taking for Rothacher said they turned their backs on him and hurried from the store.

At the time of the holdup the store was brilliantly lighted, and people were passing on Capitol street. A man who entered the store just after the robbery, afterward pursued the men on Union street and caught a glimpse of them, but being unarmed he was unable to make any attempt at capturing them.

NEW ATOM THEORY SHOWN SCIENTISTS

ITHACA, N. Y., June 21.—(AP)—The Heisenberg-Compton atom, a new picture of how negative bits of electricity fit together to make solid substance, was presented to the American physical society at Cornell university today.

It reveals electrons, as the electrical particles are called, moving in vapory clouds rather than like planets in orbits.

Dr. Arthur H. Compton, American Nobel prize winner in physics, reported the discovery. He said this new picture was made in the Ryerson physical laboratory at the University of Chicago and these experiments come the closest of any yet performed to showing "what the atom looks like."

Dr. Compton obtained this look into atoms by combining the latest methods of observation and of mathematics. The atoms at which he looked were helium. Rays shining through helium gas produced halos much like the familiar ring around the moon.

Just as the moon halo reveals the size of invisible droplets of water causing it, Dr. Compton said the helium gas halos showed not only the size of atoms but
