First of its Kind Along Pacific Highway in Downtown Area

The first completely modern super service station on the Pacific highway in downtown Salem will celebrate its opening today and the management has announced special treats for visitors during the day.

The new Texaco station at Court and Church, operated by Chet Lindley and Ray Nash, well known in Salem automotive circles, will handle a full line of Texaco products and Kelly tires. Complete super service, in fact, including battery service, car washing, tire service, high pressure lubrication, and gas and oil, is the program for the new establishment.

The proprietors, Lindley and Nash, have been in the service station business in Salem for several years. Lindley has been here since 1920, and part of that time has been employed at the Shell Oil company station on Court and Capitol. Nash has worked at Smith and Watkins and other stations for some time.

For visitors during the day the proprietors have "free smokes for the men, free candy for the ladies, and free balloons for the kiddies."

STORE BUILDING IS TO BE REMODELED

Frank H. Struble, Salem architect, has received architect's commission to remodel the building on North Liberty street now occupied by the Roth Grocery company and the Y. W. C. A. in preparation for entry of the Grand Stores, Inc. into this territory next spring, it is announced. Struble has drawn plans for the work and officials of the New York concern have approved them, he says. Soon after the first of the year the Roth Grocery company will vacate the building and active work began. Struble will issue the call for bids from his office, it is said.

Expenditure of between $12,000 and $15,000 is involved in the remodeling, which calls for a new building front, new floor, new wiring and other features. The Grand Stores, Inc., will occupy the lower floor, while the Y. W. C. A. will continue their headquarters on the second floor.

INCUMBENTS LEAD IN NORTH DAKOTA

FARGO, N. D., June 27.—(AP)—All three of North Dakota's congressmen and Gov. George F. Shafer maintained their leads Thursday as additional returns were tabulated from yesterday's primary with the governor's majority for republican renomination exceeding 20,000.

The primary was mostly a republican affair with only one contest on the democratic ticket, that for governor, and interest in it so slight little attempt was made to tabulate returns. The battle on the republican ticket was between the Independent Voters' association and the Nonpartisan League, each backing a complete slate.

Shafer's nomination by the Independents was virtually assured when 1,147 of the state's 2,228 precincts had given him 68,364 votes against 28,313 for his non-party opponent, E. H. Brant. In the congressional races, O. B. Barness, independent; J. H. Sinclair, nonpartisan; and Thomas Hall, independent, all had majorities. A. C. Townley, once leader of the nonpartisan faction in the state, was wrapped in an attempted comeback running a poor third in seeking nomination from the third congressional district.
