GUIDANCE WORK PLAN AT S. H. S.

Program Being Outlined by Vocational Director of State College

Further indication that a fully developed vocational guidance program will be adopted in the Salem high school next year was seen in request received yesterday by Principal Fred Wolf from L. L. Love for all available data on the local school, pupils and teachers. Mr. Love, who spent two days here this spring and who is vocational guidance director at Oregon State college, is now doing advanced work at the University in Columbus, Ohio, and in connection with his studies is working out an entire vocational guidance project, using the Salem school as a basis for his survey and project.

Mr. Wolf and Mr. Love have already done preliminary work toward instituting the guidance program here, and this summer both will make further independent studies. Wolf said yesterday he hoped their research carried on this summer will make a workable program to be started as soon as school work is organized this fall. Home Room to be Fulcrum of Work

The home room, which was instituted here last fall, will be the fulcrum of the guidance program here, with uniform studies being carried on one or two hours a week during the home room period. While the program is being introduced here, Love will spend two weeks in the school helping to get it under way.

The same room is the most satisfactory means for bringing the guidance program to its highest use, Wolf says he has read in "Course and Careers" by Ralph P. Gallagher, which is just off the press. With the home room so used, full elsewhere in this extra-curricular program, there is little reason to believe but that Salem high is ideally organized to start it.

Lectures and projects carried on in the home room, with the instructor therein the teacher, will be basis for the guidance studies. In this way, a number of additional and practical knowledge will be acquired by every student during the year.

Vocational guidance, Wolf points out, no longer means enrollment in shop, manual training or machine course, but applies to any phase of life which will teach the student to go forth better equipped to meet the problems of the business world.

A thorn reputed to be from the "crown of thorns" worn by Christ is in a collection of religious relics in Vienna.

Celebration Planned—The third annual celebration and old time picnic at Green's bridge has been planned for July 4, and no admission is to be charged. W. A. DeLaird is to be the speaker. A baseball game between Jefferson and Turner, a tug 'o' war, as well as special music, games, races and late in the evening, the customary fireworks, are features planned to enliven the day.

Reunion Is Monday—Reunion of the Hug clan, of which Supt. George W. Hug is a member of the second generation, will be held at LaGrande Monday, June 30, he has been advised. It is not probable he will attend. Only one member of the first generation of the clan, a woman who is now 94 years old, still lives. She plans to meet with her kinsmen Monday.

Estate Appraised—The estate of Walter F. Downing, an insane person, has been appraised at $200 by R. E. Anderson, Jessie Rupert and H. Frank. Robert E. Downing is the guardian. Hearing to show cause why real property belonging to the estate cannot be sold has been set for Monday, July 28.

Case Transferred—The case of Robert Clark vs. Mrs. Delano Bell has been transferred from the Polk county court to Marion county. Clark is seeking to recover judgment against Mrs. Bell in the sum of $295, wages which he alleges are due, plus costs.

Poste Ball—Denton J. Humphreys, Portland, arrested early on Friday morning and charged with reckless driving and driving while intoxicated, was released Friday upon posting $100 bail. He was cited to appear this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Old Friends Arrested—Bill Porter and Claud Johnson, well known figures at the city hall, were arrested and charged with drunkenness Friday afternoon. It was their second time in two weeks, police said.

PROFESSIONAL SOLVER OF PROBLEMS IS MRS. SHANKS, PROTECTIVE BUREAU HEAD

"When in Trouble See Her," is Motto Followed by Thousands Who Are Helped

By OLIVE DOAK
Being in trouble is sad business. It is never realized until it happens. Accounts are read of this boy or that girl, this man or that woman, who has found himself in the clutches of the law for misdemeanors or crimes of one kind or another. As long as it does not come into one's own family one often shrugs one's shoulders and wonders where the human race is going—and incidentally why there are not more of the details in the paper.

There is a person in Salem who for many years has been "in trouble" as she puts it when ever she is called, be it night or day—Mrs. Myra Shanks—but one does not reach about her much. She prefers to work quietly and does not like to give out stories about the folk who are "in trouble" because as she says, "where it is your brother or sister you would not like all the details to be known and talked about by everybody."

Post Important One
Mrs. Shanks is "the" protective division for girls and women in Salem. Larger towns have many women who make up the protective division but in Salem there is only one, Mrs. Shanks; Mrs. Nona White of the juvenile court division and Mrs. Shanks work together many times but they each have separate divisions for which they are responsible.

Way back in Utica, New York, Mrs. Shanks was born and there she lived until she was 14 years old. At that time she came to Red Oak, Iowa, with her parents. Here she finished school, and here she, Myra Bliss, became the wife of J. B. Shanks. Here in Red Oak Mrs. Shanks' five children, two boys and three girls, were born. And here, too, when her children grew up and were teaching, or away in school, Mrs. Shanks did her first police court work, because she was interested in young people and liked to read law. This work was done just before she and Mr. Shanks left Iowa for Salem, Oregon, to which place they came in 1905.

In 1915 Mrs. Shanks became "police matron" of the Salem police squad, which at that time included five officers, the chief of police and herself. Now there are 20 officers, the chief of police and Mrs. Shanks.

Justice Widespread
In answer to the question as to what sort of difficulties come most often, Mrs. Shanks kindly face took on a thoughtfully puzzled look, and then she laughed. "I don't know what to say." The following list was picked up during the interview and gives some things of an idea as to what keeps her busy—she is inspector of dance halls in which there is an average of 900 people who make up the dance crowd; she is a member of the motion picture censor board of Salem; makes investigations either alone or in conjunction with the police, of complaints concerning cases involving women and girls; does jail work with the women prisoners; does her own office work, and this involves much correspondence records kept in detail of each case which comes in so that they may be had for reference at any time by authority, and endless other details which take time and patience.

Until recently all correspondence has been done in writing.

and all records have been kept likewise, but now Mrs. Shanks puts a new typewriter and says it has taken a lot of the burden out of office work. Are the many women and girls who come to Mrs. Shanks really criminal in their intent? No, according to her they are more unfortunate than anything else. Much of the trouble Mrs. Shanks blames on the lax discipline in the homes. Another thing encouraging is that there are not so many "repeaters" among the folks whom she has to deal with. One lesson is enough in many instances.

Antos Source of Trouble
There is one thing which Mrs. Shanks wishes could be controlled and that is putting automobiles in the hands of youth. They open up too many opportunities for trouble with liquor, getting parties and being trouble in their wake.

Many of the cases which come to Mrs. Shanks are girls from homes which are excellent. The reasons for their difficulty are many. One of the dominant looming reasons seems to be that they hate to be called "poor sports." If they don't smoke—if they don't drink—if they don't pet—they are ridiculed, and too few of them have had the training that will enable them to laugh at such poor reasoning. In speaking of cases, which by the way she never mentions by name, Mrs. Shanks will invariably say, "she was a sweet little thing," or "she is a honest little soul," or "she means right" say and all of which say very plainly that Mrs. Shanks work is near her heart and that she manages her department with all the kindness and humanness possible in consideration of the vast number of different problems that come to her every day.
