"The Sea Bride"

"That must be the biggest find of ambergis ever was," said hoarsely.

Brander shook his head.

"The Watchman, out o' Nan-tucket, brought home 800 pounds back in '58. I've heard so, at Willis had nothing to say to Following the ceremony there that; he went aft to join Tichel > Brander sent for Eph Hitch, the cooper, and showed him the ambergis. "Fix me a cask," he said, "big enough to hold all that, We'll stow it dry." Eph scratched his head. He spat over the rail.

"Fix you up a cask?" he re-peated. "Oh, aye!" He empha-sized the pronoun; and Brander's eyes twinkled. They packed the ambergris away in the captain's storeroom, a compartment at the bottom of the Sally, under the cabin, in the very stern. It rested there was not connected with the after hold, where water and stores and gear were stowed away. Brander suggested putting it there; he came to Noll Wing with his request, and secause Dan'l Tohey was with Non, Brander framed his question in a personal form,

"I'd like to stow this below us here," he said. "Best it be out of each of the men." Dan'l scrawled; Noll looked up heavily, met Brander's eyes. In the end, he nodded.

"Where you like," he said sulk-ily. "Den't bother me." Brander smiled; and the cask was hidden away below. But it was not forgotten; it could not be forgotten. From its hiding-place, the ambergris made its influence felt all over the ves-sel. It was like dynamite in its potentialities for mischief. The mates could not forget it; the boat-steerers in the steerage discussed it over and over; the men in the fo'c's'le argued about it endlessly.

It was a rich treasure, worth as

The program hours will be between three and eight o'clock of the afternoon of July 12. It is urged that all members of the Salem Writers group who can accept the invitation do so in order that there may be a good representation from the club.

The and Man I. O Claracter is the profits of the cruise they would all share in it. If it was a part of the profits of the cruise they would all share in it. If it was a part of the profits of the cruise they would all share in it. If it was a part of the profits of the cruise they would all share in it.

was it Brander's? If it was a part of the profits of the cruise they would all share in it. If it was Brander's, they would not.

Brander—and this word had gone around the ship—had spoken of it as his own. For which some condemned and hated him; some praised and chose to flatter him. If the worth of the stuff was divided between them all, Noll Wing and Dan'l Tohey would have the lion's chare, and the men forward would have so more than the price of a debauch. If it were Brander's alone, they might beg or steal a larger share from him. Or—and not a few had this thought—they might seize the whole treasure and make off with it.

The possibilities were infinite; the chances for trouble enormous. This new tension aboard the Sally came to a head in the cabin; the very air there was charged with it. Dan'l and old Tichel were against Brander from the first; Cox was inclined to support him. Dan'l angels to support him.
