

FRUIT HARVEST IN FULL SWING

Royal Annes, Bing, Mont-Morency Cherries Being Picked at Zena

ZENA, July 12.—Orchardists are getting their cherry crops off to market rapidly now. Cherries which were cracked or bruised by the hail and rain storms earlier in the season are being sorted out as they are picked.

Most Royal Annes, Bing and Mont-Morency cherries have been picked and Lambert picking is now on.

S. D. Crawford has the only Montmorency cherries in this vicinity and finished picking them Saturday morning. His orchard also includes Royal Anne, Bing and Lambert cherries.

One of the most magnificent specimens of Santiam lily ever grown at Zena was that which is growing on the W. H. Crawford lot at the Zena cemetery.

This lily is rather late and was 62 inches tall and had 75 blossoms and buds at the one time. There were 61 full blossoms and 14 buds. The Santiam lily is also known as the Mount Hood lily, as it grows on the slopes of Mount Hood equally well.

SOUTH SALEM SEEKS BUS SERVICE AGAIN

Suspension of Route Without Warning Said to Work Many Hardships

SALEM HEIGHTS, July 12.—Since the abrupt cessation of bus service by the Southern Pacific company from the city limits to the Salem Heights school, several citizens have banded together and are trying to persuade the company to continue to render half hour, or at least hourly service to the city.

Without warning the company suspended service and is working considerable hardship on caring workers who do not own cars. The company states it does not pay operating expenses to run out from the city limits, but the residents feel that if the company would render at least hourly service, instead of the usual 15-minute service, more people would ride and that the reduction of the trips would offset with some profit to the company and a service that the south Salem people feel they are entitled to.

'HAPPY JACK' CAPABLE Pet Squirrel Drinks Milk From Spoon REAL PET TO KIDDIES

ZENA, July 12.—Country-bred children have the advantage over those born in the city in many ways. One especially delightful privilege they enjoy is the companionship of wild pets as well as many tame ones.

One of the oddest and most entertaining little pets which has been heard of recently is "Happy Jack," the week old baby grey digger which Jimmy Shepard found in the road and took home to raise.

The tiny creature is fed milk from a spoon and greedily holds on to the spoon with its paws.

Baby Soon Spoiled Evidently it is becoming badly spoiled for when allowed to play on the floor and no one gave attention, it stretches out as though ill with convulsive writhings and one watching picks it up, then, lo, what a transformation. The apparently sick squirrel is frolicsome and happy again.

"Happy Jack" seems to be quite contented with his present home.

12-Cent Gas Is Not As Good as Thought; Quality Proves Bad

CHERVAS, July 12.—Twelve cent gas proved a hindrance to a car of four three-year-old tourists Wednesday. They had their car filled with 12 cent gas in Portland, and a short distance north of Gervais the car refused to go further.

A Gervais garage man was called, who towed them into town and set to work to locate the trouble. After checking the motor and finding nothing wrong the fuel was checked and it was found to be a very low grade of gas.

This was drained off and the tank filled with a good grade of gas; after having their dinner the party proceeded on their way to Fresno, California.
