

BANKER SLAIN IN COURTROOM

Realtor, Crazy by Losses in Financial Crash, Shoots Witness

LOS ANGELES, July 14—(AP)—A spectacular career from factory helper to millionaire closed in tragedy today when Motley H. Flint, retired banker, age 46, was shot to instant death in a courtroom by Frank D. Keaton, 56-year-old Inglewood, Cal., realty man.

Brooding over financial ruin by loss of savings seven years ago prompted the killing.

The victim for years was a leading figure in political, financial and motion picture financial circles of Los Angeles. Some thirty years ago he was postmaster here, and he was the brother of the late Frank P. Flint, former United States senator.

The thought to slay came Sunday after he had taken his two little girls to Sunday school, Keaton, trembling and broken, told the police. It developed into a maddening desire which led him into the superior court today where he knew Flint was a witness.

The gray haired banker was testifying as Keaton sat in the second row of spectators' seats toying with an old pistol in his pocket.

Flint stepped from the witness stand and was passing through the gate at the rail to the bar. Keaton stood up and fired three shots point blank. The banker fell dead. Keaton threw the pistol at him, raised his hands in surrender and broke the intense silence following the shots with the cry "This fellow ruined me! He ruined me!"

Trial Not Concerned With Man's Losses

The banker had retired 18 months ago and gone to France. Two months ago he returned to face difficulties with 17 others for usury conspiracy in connection with the Julian petroleum crash in which investors lost millions. These cases were dismissed but he faced charges of violation of the state corporate securities act.

The trial, scene of the tragedy, was not connected with the Julian case nor with the investment in which Keaton said his savings were lost. It was a suit by David O. Selsnick, film executive, for $250,000 damages against a bank here in connection with a stock deal.

Keaton made no resistance after the slaying. He said he lost his savings in buying First National bank stock through Flint seven years ago. Allentons who examined him said he was suffering from some form of psychosis.

CLAGGETT PLANS TO PLANT MANY TROUT

Ben Claggett, deputy game warden, is back in town after an inspection of the lakes in the Mt. Jefferson area where he plans to plant a large amount of fish this summer. Claggett says a number of lakes there, ideal for trout, are as yet without any fish.

Claggett inspected Marion lake and found fairly good fishing there. "Panola lake, long-time favorite with fishermen, is drying up rapidly this summer due to a 'leak' in the outlet.

Claggett hopes to get back to the lake soon and stop this leak. He says all the Jefferson park area is ideally suited for fishing. Just now the principal handicap to the lake Walton enthusiast is the large quantity of mosquitoes. Claggett came back bearing numerous evidences of their assault.

CHILD SLAYER FACES DOCTOR IN MENTAL CASE

PAPER WORKERS TO GET REDUCED WAGE

A reduction in all salaries and wages paid in the Oregon Pulp and Paper company here of 10 per cent, effective July 16, was announced Monday from the office of A. H. Fleming, vice-president of the Columbia River Paper company, which owns the plant here. In Salem the order affects 400 men and women and the reduction will bring the payroll here down from $50,000 to $45,000 per month.

Officials of the company said they hoped reductions would be temporary and expressed a wish to restore the former wage scale as soon as conditions warranted it.

The order affected employees and officers in every plant of the company, except the mill at Vancouver, Wash., where the slash has already been made.

Reduced wages were put in effect at Spaulding's mill here, at the Hammond mill in Mill City and at other lumber plants, some time ago.

He is spending a three weeks' vacation trip renewing acquaintances in Salem, Portland and along the coast.

O. E. SCHEDULE HERE REDUCED

Two Trains Daily Removed Because of Lessened Use by Passengers

Two passenger trains north and two trains south between Salem and Portland on the Oregon Electric railroad were removed from the schedule Sunday due to insufficient traffic to maintain them.

Bus and private automobile competition were given by company officials as the reason for the reduction in the number of trains. For some time trains have operated with only a handful of passengers and at some intervals along the road, no one but the crew was on the train.

Despite the reduction in schedules, extensive reconstruction and roadbed improvement is being made by the Oregon Electric. It is thought that this is being done in preparation for more extensive freight traffic to be developed when feeder lines from the Cascade country and from the Eugene timber territory are completed.

Disatisfied with location of route of the Detroit-Whitewater sector of the proposed North-South highway and also carrying complaints against the damages recommended, six or seven residents of Detroit appeared before the county court Monday morning to unload their burdens.

The court heard complaints and decided to adjourn in a body to the section under question this morning. Hedda Swart, county engineer, will probably accompany the court.

Judge Siegmund said yesterday afternoon it was more or less definite just what the delegation wanted, but that he thought the matter could be settled after the court had gone over the ground. He said the court had never actually visited the site along which these property owners lived and that the survey had been made by the federal forest service. This section of the survey goes around the edge of town and through a dense brush.
