Four Cent Spread to Next Grade Seen; Butter Firm

General Markets

No Price Changes Are Noted on Tuesday, Locally

PORTLAND, Ore., July 22 (AP) - Prime butter and butterfat were advanced 1c to 31c all the Monday afternoon session of the Portland produce exchange. Today, this leaves a spread of 4c to the next lower grade, firsts being quoted at 27c. Butter extras were firm, with demand fairly good.

The price of butterfat is unchanged at 31c delivered, Portland. Top grade eggs were steady with the demand satisfactory. Hot weather is said to be injuring quality. In fresh meats, beef prices are usually low for all grades. Fresh raspberries are at their peak with the price ranging around $2.25 a crate. Cannery demands are brisk.

Green peas from local gardens is more plentiful and prices are slightly lower.

RASPBERRIES NOW AT SEASON'S PEAK
 Fresh raspberries are now at their season's peak. Active canners' demands are limiting fresh offerings however, and prices continue steady at about $2.25 per crate. Loganberries are scarce, and are fully one dollar per crate higher than a week ago.

Green corn from local growers is more plentiful, and prices are slightly lower. Green peas from Brownstead are losing their monopoly, with moderate receipts from Seattle's heavy production. Quality of both Puget Sound and Brownstead peas is excellent. Tomatoes from the Dalles are in greater volume, and prices declined a few cents. Outdoor cucumber supply, but have replaced hot-house cukes to a large extent.

Cantaloupes are now of very good quality, demand is fairly good, and the market is firm. Walla Walla onions declined, with broker's sales to Portland jobbers as low as $1-10 per cwt.
