Appeal on Rice Case—Continuing that the jury returned two inconsistent verdicts and that there were errors of law and insufficiency of evidence, the Portland Seed company has filed a motion to set aside the judgment for $5,200.50 given W. A. Kothoff, plaintiff, when the case was tried in the July term of circuit court. The case hinged upon whether or not certain seed, sold to be rice rice, was actually such or merely common rice. The jury gave the money judgment, and in a special verdict said it was not the usual custom for seed companies to warrant truthness to the name of seeds.

BOND DECISION IS NOTED HERE

100 Per Cent Loan Sought In Portland Declared Contrary to Law

Attention was called by utility construction proponents in Salem yesterday to a statement issued by seven financial concerns in Portland, declaring that the city of Portland could not sell utility certificates constituting a full 100 per cent loan on land and buildings of a public market to be erected there.

The Portland firm made the statement after repeated press announcements about the proposed market took it for granted the city could not sell itself to operate a market with the market property as sole security for a loan equal to the entire investment.

A similar proposal, it was pointed out locally, has been urged for the construction of a power plant for Salem and City Attorney Trindle has declared an eastern financial firm would accept bonds with the power plant as sole security and without the city's general endorsement. Franchise Rights Add to Security.

Trindle declared, apart from the opinion on the public market, that he felt the franchise rights of Salem would constitute a junior equity or junior capital for the bond holders.

In the Portland case, the financial houses state their objections to the proposed method of financing on the following grounds:

First, such securities would constitute a 100 per cent loan.

Second, there is no historical data upon which to base an estimate of earnings.

Third, this statement is made with the understanding that such certificates would in no way be a general obligation of the city of Portland.

Hearty, Sincere Laugh Is Most Noticeable Feature Of This Expert on Wheels

Harry Scott Chased Kaiser on Cycle and His Business Is His Hobby, Too

By OLIVE DOAK
If you hear a laugh that makes you laugh for the very note of hearty good humor in it, and then catch a glimpse of a round ruddy face over covered with the just and smiling chuckle of a "guy," just as you are passing 147 South Commercial street, you will have heard and seen Harry W. Scott, the genial owner of one of the most thriving motorcycle, bicycle and wheel goods stores in four counties.

He was born in Rolla, North Dakota, and when very young accompanied his parents to Lake Charles, Louisiana, and there in this spot of which he says he can think of nothing good to say, "You sleep under mosquito netting, and have to combat everything from alligators to coon roaches," so Mr. Scott would rather be in Oregon, where he came with his family after 13 years in Louisiana.

There is another more recent reason why Mr. Scott would rather be in Oregon. He has just returned from a trip to the middle west where he was a delegate to the National Motorcycle Convention in Denver, and also attended the national dealers convention at the Harley-Davidson factory in Milwaukee Wisconsin. July 19 he was in Omaha, Nebraska, and the heat registered 104 while in Salem it was 75 degrees. July 26 in Milwaukee it was 82 degrees and in Salem in Salem it was 89 degrees which all makes a very good reason to prefer Salem.

Mr. Scott completed grade school here and attended Salem high school. During grade school he was in the largest newspaper office in the city. In high school, a Saturday and after school job was with "The Toggery," man's clothing store owned by Dave Yantis.

In July of 1912 on the last day of his sophomore year in high school, he completed his year's work at noon and at 4 o'clock that night was behind the counter of a produce store in Portland. He was in charge of the store and at the impressive age of 16. This store, which belonged to his uncle, was sold at the end of 10 months.

The Mr. Scott came back to Salem and went to work for Fred Theilman in the old Rodgers paper company. In 1914 he bought a small hardware store located at 252 State where Ray Clark's garage now stands. This he operated until 1916 at which time he became interested in motorcycles.

He was then in charge of the Harley-Davidson agency in Salem under the name of Scott and Piper. They operated until 1918, and then within 10 days they closed shop, and left a cartoon on the door showing the two of them chasing the Kaiser on their motorcycles, with the intimation underneath that they would be back when they had caught him.

Opens Present Shop—Service started until 1919. February 11, Mr. Scott was back in Salem and took up his shop where he is now located, only it was about half as large as it is now. Then he was mechanic, business manager and janitor. Now the store had doubled in space, there are four mechanics, one part man, one outside salesman, and Mr. Scott who comes down to assist with office work several days of the week.

A complete lines of accessories is in stock and about all the supplies for four counties is bought through the Salem agency. "It is a fascinating work," said Mr. Scott, "for one reason because on deals with the younger folk all the time. It is as sport as well as a good commercial business, this business of motorcycles. And there is some sort of queer fraternal spirit among the riders of motorcycles, which is not found in other fields of interest." In an aside he thought that perhaps it might be like the fraternal spirit of the automobile, but as to what caused this he could not offer an explanation any more than Mr. Scott could.

Mr. Scott also says that motorcycles in spite of all that is said against them, are the safest of all transportation. Insurance companies bear him out in this statement. He said the view is less obstructed, and the machines are under more perfect control. San Francisco has 600 units of this commercial transportation, and Victoria, B. C., has 360 pointed out Mr. Scott, which shows an increase of interest in commercial houses dating back only three years.

Noise Unnecessary—Mr. Scott had all sorts of interesting things to say about motorcycles. He objected to the noise. Said he, "there is no sense in that noise. They will run quietly if they are left as they come from the factory. Some people like the noise and so tamper with the exhaust. I once heard a few lines that hit the mark about noise and motorcycles—"You can't tell the horsepower of the motor by the sound, but you can tell the brain power of the fellow who is running it." Mr. Scott is right behind any

SCHOOL HEADS ELECT TODAY

Three Day Convention Will Close Tonight; Talks Heard Tuesday

A report on reorganization of rural schools by J. W. Critter of the state department of education, featured Tuesday sessions of the annual conference of county school superintendents. The conference will continue until tonight.

The self-rating blank for county superintendents was discussed by E. H. Castle of Benton county. A. M. Cannon of Lincoln county and R. J. Clifton of the Oregon State college.

Information on tests and a testing program was given by James M. Burgess of the state department of education. Institute themes in the light of Oregon educational plans were discussed by E. A. Sayre of Union county, James S. Gola of Tillamook county and J. W. Critter of the state department of education.

Resolutions will be considered at noon today, followed by the annual election of officers.

Virtually every county in Oregon is represented at the conference. The annual dinner was held in the Elks temple Monday night.

AIR MAIL SERVICE HERE IS IMPROVED

Slight improvements in the airplane mail service on the coast for Salem patrons is seen in announcement that after August 15 such mail intended for southern points must be in the Salem office at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The change is occasioned by a new schedule from Seattle, the airplane to leave that city at 7 o'clock at night instead of in the morning.

The plane, under the new schedule, will get into San Diego the next morning, arriving at Portland at 8:45 in the evening, at San Francisco at 3 o'clock in the morning, at Los Angeles at 6:35 and at San Diego at 8:10 o'clock in the morning.

Previous to the new time, mail had to leave Salem at 7 o'clock in the evening to get the morning plane out of Portland. Now it will leave on the mid-afternoon train to make connections with the 8:45 plane from Portland.

Dishes Piled Up In Sink Avers Divorce Plaintiff

Charging that she failed to wash the dishes but stacked them for as many as three or four days at a time; that she cursed and swore at him, exhibited an ungovernable temper and otherwise treated him cruelly and inhumanly, Earl A. Evans yesterday filed in circuit court divorce complaint against Nora E. Evans.

Mrs. Evans left him October 2, 1929, he states. They were married in December, 1927.
