THRASHING CREWS NOW BUSY AT ZENA

ZENA, Aug. 15—The T. J. Merrick thrashing outfit of the Lincoln district has arrived in this neighborhood and is at work on the farm of Jesse Walling having come up from the farm of Clarence Merrick on Tuesday afternoon.

Helping with the work this year are Mrs. Fred McKinney, cook; Will Edwards, roustabout; Charles A. Glaze, engineer; Archie Pelker, separator tender; Will Crawford and Casper Neiker, sack sewers; Lawrence Wilson, Clyde Ebbert, and Fred McKinney, pitchers; and Ben McKinney, Kenneth Griffen, Earl Good, Delwin McKinney, Jesse Walling, and Raymond Turner teamsters.

The Other Bullet

"A full set of Dostoevski's (what is more, he'd actually read 'em.) He thumbed the well worn pages of a blue-gray volume of 'The Brothers Karamazov.' "And here are the moderns—Schnitzler, Mann, 'The World's Illusion'—and Marcel Proust. Fair to middling high brow for a ranchman." Peter's eyebrow cocked up at an inquisitorial angle. "Hullo, what is this?"

From behind the displaced books he drew out a small Chinese box made of inlaid strips of wood of different colors.

"It's one of those puzzle boxes that are opened by sliding the little panels in a certain order till you get at the compartment that holds the key to open it—see?" He held out the box for Andrews' inspection. "Only it's broken. And Mortimer took good care of his curios. That's the only thing around the place that isn't in perfect condition. It's not particularly valuable, either—and of course it was perfectly worthless after it got busted."

"It doesn't look worth keeping to me," Andrews remarked turning the box over in his fingers. "No—I wonder why he kept it."

"He not only kept it—he hid it," Andrews observed.

"So he did! Gee, Andrews, you're getting bright." Peter exclaimed with exaggerated admiration. "What's more, he kept it hidden behind the books. And when Mrs. Everett was looking for a place to hide her gun, the first place she thought of was the book case. It looks as if she knew about the box, and it gave her the suggestion of a place to put the gun."

"But if the box really means anything, the silliest thing she could do was to establish a connection by choosing the same hiding place," Andrews objected.

"Of course it was silly, supporting the box has any real significance," Peter agreed. "But she had no time to stop and think. She probably didn't realize herself where the suggestion came from."

"Anyway, the box is empty." Andrews had peered into the opening beneath the broken lid.

"That makes it all the funnier that he should have thought it worth hiding," Peter answered. "Well, we can't find out anything by staring at it any longer." With a baffled sigh, he abandoned the problem of the box and turned to the table, seating himself in the big arm chair which had been occupied by the dead man.

Peter had long ago overcome any revulsion of nerves in connection with what he called "stiffs." The chair was the obvious place to sit, even though the last man to sit there had been a corpse. He leaned his head against the leather back, disregarding the dark irregular stain which marked the upholstery at the height of his right shoulder. Then, bending forward, he proceeded to open the long shallow drawer in the front of the table, and emptied its contents on the top.

"Another gun!" he exclaimed, pouncing on a heavy object half hidden under the mass of papers which had filled the drawer. "This one hasn't been fired—its ball is still in the right with in reach. No time to defend himself, I guess."

Laying the revolver to one side Peter methodically and without a qualm of conscience opened envelopes, unfolded letters, glanced at their contents and laid them aside in a neat pile.

WEST SALEM NEWS

WEST SALEM, August 15—A school meeting was held Saturday evening at the George Steward residence on account of the death of Steward, a member of the school board, having suffered a recent illness which renders him unable to leave his home. George Chapman, chairman of the board presided and the yearly budget was made out. The regular school meeting will be held September 2 and the budget will be voted on at that time.

Arthur Hathaway has purchased the Kessel property on the corner of Ruge and McNary streets and the family will make their home there.

Mrs. S. E. Means of Aumsville is at the home of Mrs. Rose Kendall Burleigh where she will make a visit of several months. The two ladies are cousins.

Mrs. M. A. White and her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Thomas enjoyed a motor trip to Eugene Monday with their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Walter White and family and Mr. and Mrs. Chester O. White and two daughters. The visitors, all of whom reside in Seattle returned home Tuesday.

Mrs. George Steward is anticipated from her sister, Mrs. Ida Munch of Kalamazoo, Mich. Mrs. Murch is expected today and will probably be in West Salem about a month. She is employed in the Michigan State hospital and must report again for duty October 31. She will return home by way of California.

A reunion of relatives was enjoyed Sunday at the home of Mrs. M. A. White and her daughter, Mrs. J. E. Thomas of Edgewater street. A special feature of the occasion was the presence of four generations of the family chain, the hostess, Mrs. Matilda Ann White representing the first day to Neskwina where Mr. Applewhite comes to benefit by the ocean air. He is recuperating from a serious illness.

Walnut crops in California are estimated to be 75 per cent normal this year, because of dieback disease.

MILL CITY MILK ROUTE PURCHASED

LYONS, August 15—Carl Jordan of Lyons purchased the Mill City milk route and bottling equipment this week from E. Gleick.

Mr. Jordan already has an established customer route at Lyons and Meham. The new route and equipment will necessitate more help and when fully established will mean steady work during the fall and winter months.

The Jordan family have operated the Lyons route for the past year and have a number of customers.

RETURN FROM BEACH
KINGWOOD, August 15—Mrs. A. L. Applewhite and daughter, Catherine have returned home after a week and a half spent at the Applewhite cottage at Neskwina. Mr. and Mrs. J. C.
