EXPORT TOTALS LOW THIS YEAR

More Flour is Shipped but Less Wheat and Lumber; Report is Filed

Offshore wheat movement from Portland during the 1929-30 season aggregated 20,965,534 bushels and from the lower Columbia river 216,651 bushels, according to the annual report of the Oregon State board of pilot commissioners filed with Governor Norblad. The report covered the year ending June 30, 1930.

The domestic wheat movement was 496,722 bushels from Portland while none was loaded on the lower Columbia. For the year ending June 30, 1929, wheat exports from Portland were 22,074,441 bushels and from Astoria 719,674 bushels were floated. Domestic shipments from Portland that season were 500,609 bushels while no movement took place from Astoria to domestic markets.

Flour exports from Portland for 1929-30 reached 827,167 barrels and there were 1,272,583 barrels sent to domestic ports. Flour exports from Astoria were 469,978 barrels and domestic shipments from that district aggregated 16,997 barrels. Flour exports from Portland for the year ending June 30, 1929, were 624,783 barrels and domestic shipments were 1,587,013 barrels. Astoria flour exports that season were 735,679 barrels and domestic shipments 28,759 barrels.

Apple Shipment Below 1929 Record

Fresh apple exports moved from Portland during the last season totaled 639,573 boxes which is in strong contrast to the showing for the preceding season when the record for the district was attained with a combined offshore movement of 2,381,497 boxes. Domestic shipments of apples by water for the last season were reported as 16,090 boxes and the previous season domestic shipments reached 35,639 boxes.

In the way of lumber floated for foreign destinations 372,706,064 feet cleared from Portland the last year and 374,524,991 feet went to domestic markets. The lower Columbia river foreign shipments measured 253,000,658 feet and the material dispatched for domestic ports from there totaled 514,946,825 feet. Portland's foreign lumber business the year before represented 409,695,236 feet and the domestic movement was 391,465,998 feet. Foreign lumber shipments from Astoria were 355,604,310 feet and the domestic business measured 448,177,888 feet.

Canned Goods Add to Volume

"Though the quantities of wheat, flour and lumber that find their way from the Columbia river gateway serve to register the trend of world markets recent years have witnessed a striking growth in the movement of other comomdities both to American and foreign clime so the amount of commerce classed as general cargo is attaining greater prominence as a factor in the trade," read the report.

"The movement of fresh apples is an illustration of what conditions in transportation have brought about and the canned goods movement, in which is embraced fish as well as orchard and garden products, has risen to a most important level in waterborne commerce of the territory. There are also lumber products filling no small space in the cargo volume and under normal conditions the list of miscellaneous freight contributes an appreciable quota to the support of berth line services plying in various directions.

Rates Decision To Aid Oregon

"Despite the drop in the barometer of commerce the year was not devoid of its advantages bearing on the future and prestige of the district and not the least among them was a decision by the interstate commerce commission in the Columbia river basin rate case, which, for the fourth time held that the region south of the Snake river should have the benefit of a 10 per cent lower rate to Portland than to Puget Sound.

"The decision also affects transportation rates on cereals generally throughout the country but of particular importance in this locality is the recognition of the differential territory as between the Columbia river and Puget Sound.

"Marked lowering of rates from much of the wheat territory in the northwest has been made by the commission, in some instances averaging 20 per cent below or more and in others less, a gain that promises much for the grain producers of the inland empire."

Slayer Suspect Taken to Jail; No Mob Danger

BOISE, Idaho, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Justice of the Peace D. A. Utter of Mountain Home, today ordered H. B. Miesenahl removed from the penitentiary here to the Elmore county jail on the ground there was no danger of a mob harming him because of the murder charge facing him and his wife in connection with the death of their foster daughter, Marie West.

In issuing the order, Judge Utter said he had been "misinformed" by T. Ragsdale, private detective of Boise when he ordered the Kinghill rancher and railroad worker taken to the penitentiary for safe keeping.

SPECIAL SESSION IS FAVORED HERE

Protection of State Water Power Resources is Deemed Urgent

cial legislative session said the existing laws were weak in that filings, after being approved by the state, may be held indefinitely without development. It was pointed out by these persons that they were not opposed to water power development in Oregon, but that they do not approve of speculation on the part of the applicants. The legislature, at its special session, probably would be asked to enact a law which would make it incumbent upon application for water power sites to complete development within a reasonable time.

Umpqua Case is Cause of Concern

Special mention was made of the recent applications of the California Power company for water power rights on the North Umpqua river and Clearwater river in Douglas county and the Klamath river in Klamath county. It was estimated that the North Umpqua and Clearwater river development would cost approximately $29,000,000. These applications are being opposed by the state fish commission, the Douglas county court and persons interested in the construction of the Roseburg-Diamond Lake highway.

It was admitted that the existing laws having to do with water power appropriations are unsatisfactory and in the interest of the applicants.

The state engineer, under these laws, has no authority to arbitrarily refuse a permit or delay proceedings beyond a reasonable time. The argument was advanced here Thursday by Dunne that in case no action is taken to curb these filings before the regular legislative session next January, most of the valuable power sites will have been filed upon by the larger utility corporations.

Governor to Be Guided by People

Governor Norblad, while refusing to give out any extended statement in connection with the proposed special legislative session, indicated that he would be guided solely by future demands.

In addition to filings of the California-Oregon Power company, permits for large power developments in Oregon have been requested by the Northwest Power company, a subsidiary of the Pacific Northwest Public Service company and other large utilities.

Concerted Move Indicated Here

A concerted effort looking to the calling of a special legislative session apparently developed Thursday afternoon, when a number of telegrams were received at the executive department when asking that such a session be held.

Among those sending telegrams were Harry L. Cross, Portland, representing the Peninsula Industrial Development association; Independent Political league, by LeRoy Lomax, secretary; Mrs. O. W. Dean, president of the Housewives council; George W. Lippert, representing the United West Side club at Aloha; Montavilla Improvement club, by C. A. Townsend, president, and J. E. Jensen, president of the Alberta Commercial club.

Jensen's telegram read:

"The state's water power resources must be protected. If no other course durable we urge special legislative session."

Other telegrams were similar in construction and urged immediate action on the part of Governor Norblad.

Duncan Wright Wins Marathon By Almost Mile

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Duncan Wright, slender little Scot, won the marathon run of the British empire games today from a field of 15. Sam Ferris of England was second, nearly three quarters of a mile behind the Scot, and Johnny Miles of Hamilton, third.

S. A. Tomlin of England set a new Canadian record of 14 minutes, 27 2-5 seconds in the three mile run with A. J. Hillhouse of Australia second and J. W. Winfield, England, third.

GOVERNOR NOT TO INTERFERE

Lauds Clifford and Clark But Keeps Hands Off Commission

was my opinion that both of these men have properly conducted the affairs of their respective offices.

"For instance, I did know that Clifford had devoted himself in a very vigorous, practical manner to the restoration of Malheur and breeding ground for migratory water fowls.

"Malheur lake is considered by all of the scientific leaders concerned with biological studies as the most ideal natural breeding ground and meeting area of water fowls within the continental limits of the United States. Mr. Clifford took the lead in the movement for a federal appropriation of a million and a half dollars for the restoration of this area which, if brought to a successful conclusion, would most probably mean the perpetuation of a hundred species of water fowls, and give to the sportsmen of Oregon at a comparatively small cost as good duck and goose shooting as they had 25 years ago.

Record of Clifford Held Praiseworthy

"Clifford also sponsored the solving of the open irrigation ditch menace and assisted materially in obtaining a federal appropriation of $25,000.00 for experiments looking to the solution of the great waste and loss of millions of young trout and salmon fry annually. The appropriation was obtained and the federal government has finally adopted an electric fish stop or screen, which is proving successful and undoubtedly will be a solution of this problem.

"Clifford also was a leader in game farm propagation of field and upland birds. He is also responsible for Oregon adopting the policy of holding trout fry and turning them into the streams as a legal sized trout capable of taking care of themselves.

Deficit Overcome Under His Regime

"When Clifford took office the game commission was faced with a very large deficit. By careful administration of funds of the department that deficit has been turned into a surplus.

"As to the matter of game law enforcement it is immaterial what yard stick one uses to measure. One person may say that educational propaganda is the correct method; another may say that the only yard stick is the number of arrests made by the department. Still others may measure by the total fines collected. I observe from figures of the department that approximately $25,000 more in fines have been imposed and collected during the three years that Mr. Clifford was at the head of the department than in any other three year period in its history. Mr. Clifford was a member of the commission before he became game warden and consequently brought his experience as a commissioner into the office when he assumed it."

MAY CLASS PLANES WITH SUBMARINES

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 21—(AP) — International rules applying to the use of submarines should also apply to aircraft in time of war, Admiral Sir Herbert Richmond, former president of the British Imperial Defense college, told the Institute of Politics today.

Admiral Richmond said the difficulties of utilizing aircraft against shipping in accordance with international law were similar to those facing submarines. It is impossible, he contended, for aircraft to ascertain absolutely the identity of ships from mere sight. It is necessary to board the ship and examine its papers and cargo and even then identification is not absolute.

Stebbins Shown Big Spender in Nebraska Race

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 21.—(AP)—W. M. Stebbins, state treasurer and "regular republican," opponent of Senator G. W. Norris, victor in the recent primary election, spent more than $21,000 in conducting his campaign, an expense account filed today showed.

Of the funds available for his contest, $17,068 was largely donated by Nebraska friends, Stebbins himself giving $5,910.

Senator Norris listed expenditures of about $2,400 in his account filed several days ago.

The alleged refusal of these two girls to accept an American flag for the Communist children's camp at Van Etten, N. Y., is said to have been the spark that touched off a raid upon the camp, in which about 1,500 men and boys participated. After burning a fiery cross before the camp and tearing down a red flag at the entrance, the mob was got under control by Sheriff H. C. Tifft, of Elmira, and his men.

FLOUR RACKET EVIDENCE SEEN

violence in connection with reputed food racketeering came today when Jacob Green owner of a Brooklyn trucking business delivering flour from jobbers to bakers took the stand. His head was shaved on top and the bald circle was crossed by a long wound.

Truckman Beaten After Withdrawal

Green said he had been a member of a truckmen's association and Richter had attended a meeting and made himself the controlling factor. After that each member was charged five dollars a month for each truck and at last an additional levy was imposed of one cent for each barrel carried. Green said he refused to pay his tribute and Richter told him if he did not pay he would not be responsible for what happened.

Green maintained his right to withdraw from the organization and last week five men called at his office and beat him with iron bars, he said.

Kalama's Water Line Is Tapped, Mayor Discovers

KALAMA, Wash., Aug. 21.—(AP)—Mayor Ficklin believed today he had solved Kalama's threatened water shortage.

The mayor discovered the main pipe line had been tapped three miles up the Kalama river. He sent Sheriff Dill to investigate.

The sheriff returned with an 80 gallon still and with Al Williams and C. D. Sheppard, of Kelso, as prisoners. Dill said the two men had tapped the water main to operate their still.

OLMSTED TELLS HIS OWN STORY

Upholds Hubbard Tale of Contributions Made to Campaign Funds

ing by Leslie E. Salter, assistant United States attorney general, sent out from Washington, D. C., to conduct the proecuton. Olmsted was a Seattle police officer from 1907 to 1920 when he first was arrested on liquor charges.

Early in his testimony, which is intended to corroborate charges made against the prohibition chiefs in the testimony of Hubbard, Olmsted asserted he had been called upon by C. T. McKinney, then chief assistant United States attorney here to "take out federal insurance" in the form of a $3000 contribution to the gubernatorial campaign of Thomas P. Revelle, to prevent interference with Olmsted's extensive liquor operations.

McKinney Brought In For First Time

Olmsted said he paid the $3000 and that he made numerous presents of from $50 to $100 and bottles of gin to McKinney until the first Olmsted case came to trial in 1926.

While Hubbard had testified to paying bribes to the other four defendants he had not mentioned McKinney. In response to a question by McKinney's attorney several days ago, Hubbard said as far as he knew McKinney was not a party to the corrupt "protection system" involving the other defendants.

Besides wringing from Hubbard the admission that his only purpose in becoming a prohibition agent was to wreak revenge on Whitney, defense attorneys made two sensational disclosures in the last hours of Hubbard's cross examination.

1—Both Bernard N. Hicks, state superintendent of the anti-saloon league, and Mrs. Lillian M. Vincent, president of the western Washington W. C. T. U. will be defense witnesses who will attempt to impeach Hubbard's testimony.

2—A. C. Durham, Bellingham attorney, was revealed as a surprise witness, who, defense attorneys indicated, will testify that Hubbard, while a Whatcom county sheriff in 1929 after his dismissal as a dry agent, offered to "sell out" his testimony as a state witness for $500. Durham was present in court and Hubbard identified him, but denied having made any improper proposition to him. Durham was defense attorney for Clyde Ragan, who was convicted largely on Hubbard's testimony and sent to prison.
