

MAY WIPE OUT GENERAL LEVY

If New Taxes All Approved Property Will Pay Small Amount

In case the supreme court upholds the state in three suits attacking the validity of the state intangibles tax law, and the voters approve the state income tax law at the November election, revenues will be available next year sufficient to wipe out any tax on property within the six per cent limitation amendment.

In event the voters refuse to approve the state income tax law, and the intangibles tax law is sustained, then the entire state levy, including the elementary school tax, would be reduced to less than $3,000,000. The total amount levied by the state for all purposes in 1930, including the elementary school tax, was $6,883,000.

Records in the offices of the state tax commission show that intangibles taxes for 1930 have been collected in the amount of $580,042.80. The second half collections of this tax will begin on September 1. Officials estimated that the second installment would aggregate $343,158. Excise taxes paid this year total $423,717.71, with $225,925.96 yet to be received. The second half of the excise tax is due and payable in October.

Three Million Will Be Raised
Revised figures prepared by the tax commission show that the intangibles tax for the year 1930 will raise approximately $1,250,000, while the excise tax will return to the state $750,000. The income tax, if approved by the voters in November, will add another $1,000,000 to the state's revenue. A surplus of approximately $950,000 in intangibles and excise taxes collected this year will be carried over into 1931.

The law provides that all funds derived from the operation of the intangibles and excise tax laws shall be applied toward reducing the property tax. This was taken into consideration at the time the tax levy for 1930 was announced by the tax commission last December.

BILLY CHAMP WINS OVER SANDE MOUNT

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 23.—(AP)—Outstanding Reville Boy and Earle Sande in a thrilling stretch finish today, Billy Champ and Tommy May scored a neck victory in the $3,000 Governor's derby, blue ribbon racing event of the Illinois state fair.

Sande, who came to Springfield by airplane from New York to ride Charles E. Best's temperamental three year old, gave his mount a characteristic ride, but the Warm stables' entrant had a little too much left and May got it out of him in time to win. The Keeneland Stud farm's Jean La Fitee was third, with Feltish, owned by Mrs. John D. Hertz of Chicago, in fourth place.

Private Timber Owners Assessed too Much for Fire Protection, Claim

That private timber owners are paying more than their share for the protection of Oregon's vast timber resources, was the opinion expressed here recently by state officials who have had access to the records of Lynn Cronmiller, state forester.

The records show that the federal government has responded liberally, but the state appropriations for fire protection are not as large as in many other states, based on the same area of timber. An effort probably will be made at the 1931 legislature to increase the state appropriations for this purpose.

A report of Mr. Cronmiller showed that during the year 1928 the private timber owners expended a total of $375,659 in the protection of Oregon's four billion board feet of merchantable timber. The federal government contributed $83,575. The state of Oregon, according to the records, contributed only $30,000 for the two years period or $45,000 a year. The state's appropriation was only half of that of the federal government and less than 10 per cent of the total amount expended in fire protection operations.

The Clark-McNary appropriation for 1930 was $99,000 in excess of that for the year 1929.

SOLVE MYSTERY OF ELEVEN YEARS AGO

ple, many of the from far places, viewed the girl's body in 1919, as it lay for days in a morgue here awaiting positive identification. Dozens of clues were traced down by police and newspapermen. The girl was finally buried in a potter's field and the case assigned by police to the limbo of unsolved crimes. Every year, on the morning after Memorial day, a wreath of flowers was found on the "mystery girl's" grave, but this memorial was generally ascribed to the generosity of some unknown Omaha citizen whose heart was touched by the girl's youth, beauty and mysterious and lonely death.

Sylvester, however, kept up his search, convinced that, sooner or later, the girl's identity would be established. It was a photograph he had caused to be taken while the girl was in the morgue, and that was identified by her father.

COPCO'S ATTITUDE IS TERMED VICIOUS

The attitude of the California-Oregon Power company, which recently filed applications for water power development on various southern Oregon streams, is of a vicious character and a severe blow to the development of that part of the state, according to resolutions adopted recently by the Gold Hill city council. Copies of the resolution were received at the executive department here Saturday.

"The city council of Gold Hill protests against the issuing of any water appropriations until such time as the state of Oregon, its municipalities and the industries thereon are adequately protected," read the resolution.

"We favor the enactment of a law designed to preserve the rights of the citizens of the state to one of their greatest resources and adequate protection against the apparent political propaganda; control of the newspapers and control of our state legislature."

FINAL WEEK ON AT PLAYGROUND

Keen Competition in Sight For Final Awards at Friday Program

This week concludes the summer's activities on the 14th street playground, where many Salem children for the last two and one-half months have revelled in sports of all kinds.

During the last week Dress Up day and the swimming events drew an unusually large attendance.

Keen competition will be had for the awards to be given next Friday. Children who have had the best attendance during the season and those earning the most ribbons will be given memberships for the year in the Y. M. C. A. through the kindness of William Hamilton, manager of the Pacific Northwest Public Service company.

Handiwork to be judged Thursday. Thursday, August 28, the mats, baskets, boats and airplanes will be judged and ribbons given.

Friday will be reserved for general field day which will include swimming races and a diving contest.

Barbara Causey, five years old, has been present each day at the playground since June 10. Irma Hiler has missed only three days.

All awards and prizes for the summer attendance will be given Friday.

Two of the prizes to be given have been provided by Otto C. Buff, who conducts an auto repair shop at 515 South Commercial street.

DOMINION OF SEA SAID POET'S PLEA

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 23.—(AP)—"Domination" of the sea is "a phrase of the poets" and never has been demanded by Great Britain, Admiral Sir Herbert Richmond, former president of the British Imperial defense college, told the institute of politics today.

Great Britain's demands in naval armament came up at the round table on armament limitations when Commander Thomas C. Kinkaid of Washington, secretary of the general board of the navy department, said he could not conceive of any substantiation of the British theory of "absolute needs" of naval armaments for security.

He pointed to British demands at the Geneva conference for 70 cruisers totalling 600,000 tons, to fulfill their "absolute needs" regardless of the relative strength of other nations.

"The British object," he said, "appeared to be expansion rather than limitation."

Admiral Richmond replied that Great Britain demanded only sufficient naval armament to provide "the essentials of security" and that the United States demanded much more than these essentials.

Commander Kinkaid thought that in event of war between Great Britain and the United States, this country, with an equal fleet, would be unable to cut off England's food lines to Europe or the British dominions.

DELAY OF HUNTING SEASON REQUESTED

Unless rain falls within the next few days, Governor Norblad will be asked by the state forestry board to postpone the opening of the hunting season from September 15 until October 1. The proposal was said to have been considered at a meeting of the state forestry board held in Portland Friday.

Governor Norblad said he would give the request consideration. Sportsmen have contended that hunters are not responsible for fires in the forests and they are opposed to delaying the activities of the hunters until October 1.

The governor indicated that he would issue a statement dealing with the request as soon as it arrives officially at his office.

Bynon Acquires Residence Here After Absence

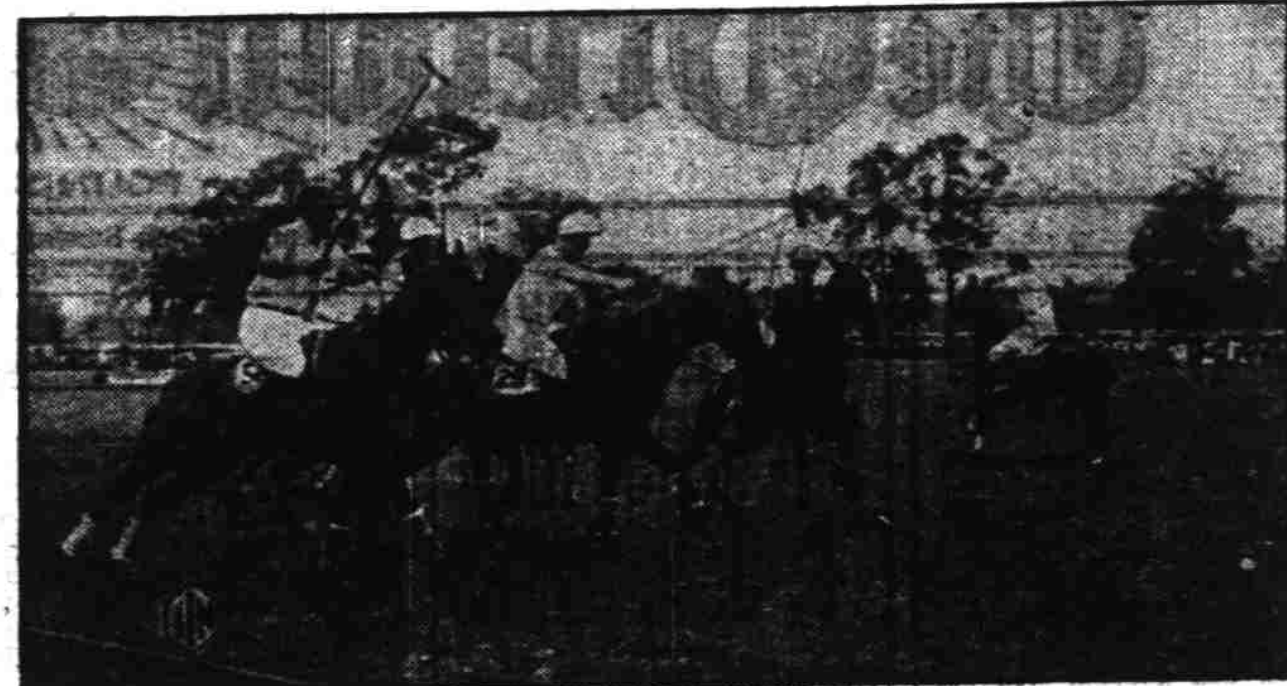

Fred S. Bynon, who has made his home at North Bend for a number of years, has recently returned to Salem to again establish his home. Mr. Bynon is well known by a great many Salem residents and was at one time very active in the real estate business here. He has purchased a residence at 860 E. street from the A. F. Schmale estate. In this transaction the seller was represented by J. F. Ulrich, local realtor. Mr. Bynon has opened law offices in the Oregon building.

E. K. Plasecki sold a modern brick home in Kingswood Heights addition to W. Ludd Read recently from Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. Read is the manager of the State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. of Bloomington, Ill. These sales involved consideration totaling approximately $15,500.

ENGINEER SAYS DELAY ASSURED

Special Legislative Meet Unnecessary Says Rhea Luper in Statement

session, his close friends intimated that he probably would refuse to issue the call in view of the opposition that has developed. A number of persons who are opposed to the special session said it was purely political and was not being agitated with a view of benefitting the taxpayers.

The governor let it be known Saturday that he would investigate the authority of the reclamation commission to determine whether it was possible to defer action on the water applications now on file until after the regular legislative session in January. Kay declared there was no question but that the reclamation commission has this authority.

Could not Limit Scope of Session
Officials said that under the existing laws the governor has no authority to limit the activities of a special legislative session, and that many matters might be considered in addition to those outlined in the call.

Although no date has yet been set for the meeting, it was reported today that members of the state reclamation commission would confer here sometime next week in connection with power development applications. A definite statement probably will be issued at that time. Members of the state reclamation commission include the governor, secretary of state and state treasurer.

Virtually all of the telegrams received by the governor asking for the special session referred to the applications of the California-Oregon Power company for permission to develop power on the North Umpqua river and Clearwater lake in Douglas county at a cost of $29,000,000. These applications were filed in the state engineer's department two weeks ago. Other applications for water power sites have been filed by this company on the Klamath river in Klamath county.

Among the organizations most interested in the special session are the Oregon state grange, state federation of labor and the Housewives Council of Portland. These three organizations sent lengthy telegrams to Governor Norblad impressing upon him the importance of the special legislative session.

The Chicago ace and his partner won the doubles crown today by defeating Edgar Yocumans, Washington, and Thomas Markay, Indianapolis, in straight sets, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

Here, There And Yon

Bits of Personal News Gleaned About Interesting People

August Huckestein is walking about town somewhat irate at the Oregon Journal of 1930 as compared with the Journal of Sam Jackson's day. "The policy of the paper is radically changed," commented Huckestein on Saturday. "Jackson would be out now working for the democratic nominee; the present paper is overcome by the spirit of George W. Joseph. However, we'll make it anyway. You'll find staunch republicans turning to Mr. Bailey rather than vote for Julius Meier." Huckestein has long been a leader in the ranks of Dame Democracy and served here as postmaster under the Wilson administration.

It is a case of Meier and "clean out the riffians" in the mind of George Vick who was downtown Saturday after some busy days in his walnut orchard where he expects a large crop. "I'm tired of too many employees in the statehouse doing too little work," says Vick. "I noted at the republican convention that Mettsch's votes drew little applause but when Julius Meier gained just one vote there was a salvo of applause. This is a year for change in Oregon. I predict the election of Mr. Meier."

WORK ON CHEMAWA GYM IS PROMISED

Construction work on a new gymnasium for the Chemawa Indian school will be started shortly according to information from Washington, D. C., received Saturday by Senator Charles McNary.

Plans for the new building are to be sent this week from the office of Commissioner Rhodes of the Indian bureau, a wire to McNary reads. As soon as these are available, bids can be called for construction of the new building.

An appropriation of $60,000 for the gymnasium was authorized at the last session of congress.

To Defend Name W.C.T.U. Women Hurry to Court

SEATTLE, Aug. 23.—(AP)—A group of women representing themselves as W. C. T. U. members tried to force their way into the Lytle-Whitely trial Friday, saying the name of their organization "was being blackened within."

A warm altercation followed with deputy marshals and they were compelled to get into line with more than 500 persons waiting to get in.

Roy Olmsted, former liquor king, had testified earlier in the day of contributing $250 for the "dear old ladies of the W. C. T. U."

COOK ATTACKS PARTY BOLTERS

Statement Refers to Meier As "Sulking" When he Fails to win

democrats and wish to disrupt the republican party, would have complained with equal bitterness had the republican state central committee employed the open ballot, for then they would have charged that bosses wanted to see how their hirelings were voting.

"The principal and the leaders in the independent movement had equal opportunity before the republican state central committee. They lost fairly in a fair fight. But they were poor sports."

"Unable to run the game, they sulked and went away to start a game of their own. Joseph Platform Decried No Issue."

"To encourage unthinking republicans to help them destroy the republican party they had to find an issue. So they made an issue out of the late Senator Joseph's platform."

"That platform was not an issue, has never been an issue, and is not an issue now."

"There are a number of issues in this campaign, but municipal ownership is not one of them. And neither is control of the waters of the Columbia river. Those issues have already been settled."

"The real issue in this campaign, as promulgated by the principal and the leaders in the independent movement, is the existence of the republican party."

"Right of the party to exist as a free and representative party in Oregon has been challenged by men who want to seize control of the organization for their own selfish interests."

"If disgruntled cliques can destroy the party because they are not permitted to rule it then we shall soon have no party, and a premium will be placed on poor sportsmanship."

"But with the aid of loyal republicans everywhere they shall be decisively beaten at the polls in November. As chairman of the state organization I ask you to give the ticket the support to which it is entitled."
