

Producers to Discuss Milk Ordinance Tuesday Night

MILK MEN WILL MEET

Shippers of Salem Territory To Hold Session at Chamber Meet

All milk producers of the Salem territory are urged to attend the meeting which will be held in the chamber of commerce rooms at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday evening.

The present city milk ordinance is to be considered and also the new ordinance which was introduced at the last meeting of the Salem city council. The disposition of the ordinance is of vital interest to all milk producers and questions as to the producers' attitude toward the ordinance are to be discussed at this meeting.

One provision of the present ordinance which has caused some concern among producers is the milk may be accepted at the same distributing plant at which A and B milk is accepted. This situation has caused some difficulty in Portland and both producers and distributors are studying the situation in Salem.

Producers of B grade milk are emphatic in their declaration that they are anxious to give the consumers the best milk possible and are bending every effort to this end. The producers have made no effort to make the ordinance less strict but on the contrary are endeavoring to see that every precaution is taken to insure high quality in milk brought into Salem.

The meeting on Tuesday night is expected to draw a large number of producers from both Marion and Polk counties.

Four Generations Meet at Wolfers Home in Hubbard

By MAUD BIDGOOD
HUBBARD, Ore., Aug. 23.—Four generations were represented at the home of William Wolfers, "Bill" Wolfers, as he is familiarly called by his associates, this month when he had for his guests his great-grandson, Lowell Spagle, Jr., his grandson, Lowell Spagle and Mrs. Spagle, and his daughter, Mrs. Albert Spagle and family.

Mr. Wolfers, a staunch old Oregon pioneer, 82 years of age, has lived in Hubbard many years. Since the death of Mrs. Wolfers 12 years ago he has lived alone at his home located almost without in the center of Hubbard. He delights in flowers of which he has many. He also has a good garden each year doing all the work of planting and cultivating, despite the misfortune of having one crippled leg caused by rheumatism. He does all his own housework even to the canning of his fruit.

Mr. Wolfers has a brother, George Wolfers, and a sister, Mrs. Christina Stauffer, both at Hubbard, and a brother, David Wolfers at Macksburg, all of whom crossed the plains in the fall of 1863 with their parents from Missouri. There were forty-one wagons, making a train half a mile long according to Mr. Wolfers. The entire train settled at the old Aurora colony. Several years later the Wolfers brothers and their sister located on farms at Hubbard. William Wolfers engaged in farming east of Hubbard for many years. His daughter, Mrs. Spagle was born near Hubbard and with her family is now living on a part of her father's old farm. Mrs. Spagle was educated in Hubbard as were her sons, Lowell, Kenneth, Raymond and Maurice.

Lowell Spagle is a dairyman at Boardman, Ore. Lowell, Jr., a sturdy little lad of five months, is the pride of all his relatives and is the only great-grandson on either side of the families.

Mrs. James Ramey Claims Best Beans

The bean contest is apparently underway and the latest claimant for honors is Mrs. James Ramey of 1615 N. Church street, Salem, who brought to The Statesman office samples of beans, nine and one-half inches long. These beat by one and one-half inches the previous champions which were eight inches long. Rumor is that beans 14 inches long are being purchased in the Salem territory but "nothing is being moved" and so far The Statesman vouches only for the nine and one-half inch specimens brought in by Mrs. Ramey.

Plant Running at Full Capacity on Beans and Berries

STAYTON, Aug. 23.—The Stayton co-operative cannery is running at full capacity these days. The beans have just about been taken care of, but the blackberries are coming in very well. 125 women and 20 men are employed there this season. One day the first of the 48,000 cans of the well known Santiam stringless beans were canned. Two trucks are operating daily between Portland and Stayton in an effort to keep the plant supplied with cans. The estimated cost of cans a day is $1500.
