CANNERY HERE BEATS RECORD

Oregon Packing Co. Shows 1199 People Employed At Same Time

What is said to be a new canner record in Salem was made by the Oregon Packing company recently when 1199 people were employed by the company in a single day. The company is packing beans, peas and blackberries and the heavy run was due to the quantities of the three commodities on hand.

The cannery will handle around 500 tons of beans from the West Tazewell district this year. The present run is dwindling down to around 15 tons a day going through the lines there the runs have topped 35 tons on beans alone this season. It is expected about two weeks more will clean up the beans.

The equipment on the lines for handling the beans while reducing numerous processes to an automatic basis nevertheless has so speeded up production as to vastly increase the pack and still require a much heavier use of human labor.

The plant in all departments is still using about 800 employees a day which will drop off with the dwindling of the product.

Kentucky Wonder Variety Canned

The whole bean pack now is from Kentucky. Wonders coming principally from the West Tazewell section and the beans running through are of a high quality. The bulk of the pack is in No. 2 cans for the select trade but there is some quantity being put through the No. 10 for restaurant trade which is also a high quality bean although merely sent through the larger cans for bigger quantity orders.

With the advanced cookers now used in the cannery all chances of the botulism which for a time a few years ago caused some dread of using canned beans, has been entirely eliminated. Put in the cookers for the requisite time under a temperature of 250 degrees any botulism which may be lurking in the product is effectually killed.

Much of Grading Still Hand Work. In addition to this the beans are put through a course of washing which sends them into the cans entirely free from any chance of dirt or outside substances clinging to them. Much of the grading on the beans is still done by human hands but various processes such as cutting, cutting the tips from the beans and similar work has been reduced to a purely mechanical process.

The beans are all being run in the 14th street plant of the cannery while the pear and blackberry run is being made in the rehabilitated plant on 12th street.

Telephone Firm Claims Lebanon Is Encroaching

The Pioneer Mutual Telephone company, Inc., with headquarters at Brownville, has complained to the public service commission that the Lebanon Telephone company has extended its service into the complainant's territory, without first securing a certificate of public convenience and necessity. The Lebanon Telephone company contends that its enlarged service is limited to toll business, which does not require a certificate from the public service commission.

Bits of Personal News Gleaned About Interesting People

Fred Patton, superintendent of schools at Clatskanie, was in Salem on business Friday. Patton was school superintendent at Falls City. "The cooperative dairy association is building a new plant in our city," Patton reported. He says that the butter and cheese produced at Clatskanie is of high quality and that the community is prospering. There are 200 pupils in the high school which are drawn from several districts. Patton and his wife, who was Phyllis Palmer, both graduated from Willamette university.

The hop crop is none too heavy this fall and she doesn't know what the price will be but the retail merchandise business at a hop-yard business is up to a year ago, reports Miss Katherine Hartley who conducts a hop-yard store east of town during the picking season at her father's ranch near Independence. Miss Hartley has been taking a vacation from her secretarial job at the chamber of commerce to attend to her other work.

Miss Lillie Madson of Silverton passed through Salem Friday morning on her way to Eugene, where she will attend the Lane county fair as the official representative of the Oregon Farmer, western farm magazine. Madson is gaining recognition all over the west for her articles about farms and farm conditions. She recently sold two stories to Better Homes and Gardens, nationally known magazine for flower lovers.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Wakefield were in Salem Friday, while Mr. Wakefield interviewed Superintendent George Hug, concerning some school supplies. Mr. Wakefield is representative of the Clint W. Lee company of Portland, and he and Mrs. Wakefield have just returned from a three month's trip into Alaska. July 4 they enjoyed watching a baseball game at Fairbanks at midnight with the sun shedding light at an angle almost directly overhead. Mr. Wakefield made most of the Alaska towns for his company visiting even on the Arctic circle. He has been a regular caller in Salem for the past eight years, and has supplied the high school with much of its graduation supplies.

JUNK DEALER SAYS HE WAS DEFRAUDED

A temporary and later a permanent injunction against H. Malsels doing business as the Oregon Hardware company with the assistance of his son, is sought by I. Saffron in a suit brought Friday in circuit court here.

Saffron claims Malsels has broken an agreement made with him in which Malsels promised not to re-enter the retail junk business in Salem for ten years after he sold the Salem Bargain house, in 1929, to the plaintiff.

Saffron admits that he gave Malsels a right to take junk from home to home and to store it but he claims he gave no permission for him to go back into the retail business. For a time, Malsels, Saffron and S. Cline were associated together as the Salem Bargain house and Salem Junk and Hardware company. No liquidated damages were mentioned in the contracts between Saffron and Malsels which are attached to the complaint.

He asks the court for the injunctions and for such other relief as he may be granted. No liquidated damages were mentioned in the contracts between Saffron and Malsels which are attached to the complaint.

M'NARY PROTESTS GRAIN RATE DELAY

Senator McNary Friday sent a telegram to Washington protesting against the recent action of the interstate commerce commission in postponing the effective date of the so-called grain rate order from October 1 to January 1.

"The press today announced that the interstate commerce commission has deferred the reduction of freight rates on western grain from October 1 to January 1," read Senator McNary's telegram. "I regret this action and am considerably surprised that the commission should recede from its former position.

"Please confer with Commissioner Aitchison and inform him of my views. Also ask him if there is going to be any hearing for those who protest, and if so, when as I may possibly arrange to be present."

"This deferment of reduction of rates will add materially to the cost of production."

The Oregon public service commission, which intervened in the grain rate hearing, also has filed a protest against postponement of the effective date of the rate order.

ROAD ROCKING ORDER OF DAY

Johnson has Nine Crushers Busy to Cover Grades Before Rain Comes

For the next two months the order of the day for Marion county road work will be "get more crushed rock on recently graded roads," according to Frank Johnson, county roadmaster. With the rainy season approaching and with a large amount of new grading yet uncovered, Johnson will keep a battery of nine rock crushers scattered throughout the county working full-blown to pile new rock on the roads. An output of 1000 to 1500 yards daily is expected by Johnson who has a fleet of trucks working to get the rock scattered.

Johnson made an inspection of the crusher at Stayton on Friday and found it producing nearly 200 yards of rock a day while the one near Marion is turning out 125 yards daily. Sixty per cent of the Stayton rock is going into the county paving plant which is now sending "hot stuff" to the road construction at the Crawford school. When the paving program is finished the fall, Johnson expects 12 miles of new pavement will be in.

Before the paving crew started this summer on the county roads, the Southern Commercial resurfacing was done at a cost of $14,000 for the city of Salem. Johnson says Marion county finds laying its own pavement the most satisfactory method to follow both from the standpoint of quality obtained and from the standpoint of cost.

NO DEVELOPMENTS IN PROBE OF FIRE

No new developments were uncovered Friday in the investigation of the fire which Wednesday night practically destroyed the plant of the Cherry City Milling company on 7th street. Insurance adjusters in cooperation with police visited the building during the day but found nothing new.

Two police officers Thursday had turned in reports containing evidence that the fire was incendiary. The two said they had seen a burning candle surrounded with oily waste material in the basement where the fire is believed to have started.

Whitney Boise Seriously ill In California

Word that Whitney Boise, brother of Reuben P. Boise and Mrs. John Lauterman of Salem, had suffered a paralytic stroke in a Los Angeles hospital this week was received here Friday. He was said to be in a critical condition.

Boise, a Portland lawyer, is about 70 years old. He was born in Salem, attended Salem schools and graduated from the University of Oregon in 1880. For several years he worked on the Statesman, later opening a law office in Portland.

He was on a trip to California in the hope of improving his health, when the stroke came.

Ancestry is Held no aid In Politics

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—(AP)—Alexander Hamilton, great-grandson of the first secretary of the treasury, is going into politics.

In an east side district, which includes the fashionable Sutton place section, where he resides, he is a republican candidate for the state senate.

Young Mr. Hamilton is the first descendant of the great federalist to embark on a political career. He does not intend to use his ancestry as campaign material.

"This is not a nation of shintolism," he remarked. He is a graduate of Harvard, in the class of 1925, and is associated with a Wall street banking house. Before going down to Wall street, however, he did newspaper work for a time, and tried his luck as a producer of motion pictures.

Hess Wants to Be Free; Wife Held "Nagger"

H. J. Hess seeks divorce from his five-times-married wife. In his complaint filed in circuit court Friday Hess claims that shortly after they were married she began a course of continuous nagging and fault-finding. At times the treatment he received became so unpleasant Hess had to leave home.

The couple was married in Vancouver, Wash., February 21, 1925, the complaint states. Hess says his wife wants back her former name of Laura E. Smith. There are no children and no property rights are mentioned in the complaint.

INFANT DEATH RATE REDUCED

Steady Lowering is Noted Over ten Year Period; Causes Outlined

The infant death rate for Marion county is materially decreased from that of last year, according to figures released from the Marion county health unit Friday. Dating from January 1 to date the infant death rate per thousand is 36.7 as against 39.7 for the year 1935. The births for this year to date are 645 as against 910 for the whole of 1935.

The causes for death are divided into premature births, seven; infantile colic, death caused by conditions of birth, four; and the balance of five died due to congenital conditions.

Prevention for these deaths lies in the proper care of the mother during pregnancy, says Dr. Vernon A. Douglas, director of the health unit, and medical attention to the mother and child at birth and in the immediately following weeks.

The deaths found in infant life may be centered around the first hours, the first week, the first month and the first year of the baby's existence.

Rate Held Index Of Health Progress According to Dr. Douglas, the infant death rate is a delicate index as to the manner in which society is taking advantage of the modern health possibilities. An infant is particularly sensitive to water, milk, and all exterior conditions. If the death rate is low it shows that the community has good water, good milk, good medical attention and "health" intelligent parents.

The infant death rate for the past ten years in Marion county has materially changed. Between 1920 and 1924 the level stayed very close to 55.1 per thousand deaths. With the coming of the Marion county health demonstration in 1925, the death rate dropped from 50.7 per 1,000 in 1925, to 39.7 per 1,000 in 1935.

MORE RECOGNITION ASKED FOR WOMEN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP)—An appeal for a shorter working day and against sex discrimination in awarding jobs was made today by Miss Mary Anderson, director of the labor department's women's bureau, in a labor day statement.

"Finding immediate remedies for our present slump," she said, "is the urgent business confronting us and calling for straightforward thought and action. In planning a program of industrial betterment the most obvious feature to be discarded is not this or that class of workers but the long work day."

She added the shorter day was a simple expedient which did not require complicated machinery for its inauguration and said it offered the most powerful lever for relief at the present time.

Miss Anderson contended that "a period of unemployment should not be made more warped through the introduction of a sex issue," adding that both sexes "must continue to earn in order to live."
